Imperialism and the Worker
By Terris Norris

Last week's article pointed out that American-owned businesses are being carried about the world by American capitalists. It also pointed out that the effect of these companies has been painted as resulting in the oppression of workers in foreign countries. However, the truth is that the American capitalists are the ones who benefit from the exploitation of the workers. The workers are exploited and used as a source of cheap labor. This is a form of imperialism.

In the United States, the working class is also exploited. The working class is not able to make the same wages as the capitalists, and the capitalists are able to get away with this because of the power they hold. The working class is also exploited by the government, which allows corporations to operate without proper regulation.

The working class is exploited in foreign countries as well. The American government, through its policy of intervention and military action, has caused the exploitation of the workers in many countries. The working class in these countries is also being exploited by the local government, which allows corporations to operate without proper regulation.

This is a form of imperialism, and it is a form of exploitation. The working class needs to unite and fight against the capitalists and the government to end this exploitation.
Pamphlet Reveals Conditions of Laundry Worker, Supports Trade Unions as Corrective

By Nathan Osborn

Taking the workers of America by and large, those employed in the garment and allied trades are perhaps the most exploited and downtrodden section of all. For years they have been subjected to the worst forms of oppressive and oppressive working conditions, and it is said that the industrial union is a force which can be held in a recent pamphlet.

"The goal, so to speak, the final achievement of the union movement, is to do away with the exploitation of the workers. It is an effort to bring about a situation in which the workers can produce and sell their labor for a profit in the same way that they buy their food and clothes. This pamphlet presents an excellent example of how the union movement can be used to achieve this goal."
