Stool Pigeons Used by Montgomery-Ward Union

"Loyal Employees" Ordered to Report "Any Signs of Radicalism,"
Listen in to Lunch and Afternoon Coffee Breaks

Stool pigeons—the lowest people on the face of the earth—are used by the management of the Montgomery-Ward Union to spy on the actions of its members. This dastardly fact has fallen into the hands of officials of the Warehousemen's Protective Union who are conducting a battery-style attack against the Stool Pigeon tactic.

"Licensed" to do their "informative" duties, these "loyal employees" are actually the brutal henchmen of the Montgomery-Ward Union. They are instructed to report any signs of radicalism to the authorities of the warehouse at any time. The "loyal employees" are not only employed but also paid by the Montgomery-Ward Union. They are instructed to report any signs of radicalism to the authorities of the warehouse at any time.

The Labor Movement in Minnesota and the First World War

II.—From the Sinking of the Lusitania to the Anti-War Resolution of the St. Paul Labor—Wilson's Re-election Was a Referendum Against War

By Carlos Hubson

First of all, the critical social issues brought about by the events of the Lusitania disaster, the second world conflict, and the political consequences of the First World War were of great public concern.

In February 1914, Germany's invasion of Belgium was considered a violation of the country's neutrality, and the Lusitania disaster occurred on May 7. The sinking of the Lusitania was a significant event in the immediate lead-up to World War I.

In May 1914, the German government's decision to sink the Lusitania was seen as a challenge to the League of Nations, the most recent attempt to create an international peacekeeping organization.
