Trade Unionists Unite With Farmers at Trousseau Boebrach-Steinem Clique—Hill Smith Smashed From State Committee—Stirring Anti-War Resolution Adopted—Attempt to Divide Rural Sections from City Workers Fails—Clique Obstructs Transaction of Business

A united front of workers and farmers gave the Boebrach-Steinem clique a thorough thrashing at the Third Congressional District Convention held Sunday at the High School at Columbus Heights.

The farmers were led at the conduct of the machinery which ran the Hennequin County convention, at which the delegates of Minneapolis-Des Moines, rural workers, and the regular rural parties, were all united under the banner of the Farmers' Labor party of Minnesota. This control of the convention from the workers' standpoint was of no small significance.

Important Victory

The victory of the convention was particularly significant since the Third District comprises half of the Minneapolis—first, second, third, part of the fourth and all of the sixth and ninth wards, and the trade union which had designated both the city and the fourth ward conventions as anti-Farmers' Labor.
Labor Hails Anniversary Of N.S.P. Workers Victory
One Year Ago Electrical Workers Union Local 292 Won Closed Shop Contract — Story of Long Struggle for Unionism Re- told — Many Gains Won by Organized Workers

As March third rolls around again, the Minneapolis Labor Reform Association holds its annual parade in honor of the one year anniversary of the Electrical Workers Union Local 292's victory over the Northern States Power Company. The entire organization of the union, the organized workers in need of help from the socialist and labor movement. Wednesday morning, Feb. 24, 1927, over two hundred workers started from the Northern States Power Company, which is located on Summit Avenue at Camp. As quickly as the strange procession formed, in which March 4 isuty, green, red, and blue scarves of the union were spread out, the marchers started their way to the picket line across the street. The marchers, who were not only from the N.S.P. Plant, but from all parts of the city, were headed towards the picket line, where they would spend the day in support of the picket line and the union workers. The marchers were greeted with cheers and support from the workers on the picket line, who were also celebrating the one year anniversary of their victory. The parade was a success, and the union workers were able to continue their fight for better conditions and union recognition.

The writing of the novel considered in the labor story is completed. The novel, the one mentioned in the previous story, is the novel that the author is currently writing. The novel has a working title of the hero. The hero is a union organizer, and the story is set in the early 1900s. The hero is a young man who joins the union and becomes involved in the labor movement. The novel is a labor story, and it is the author's first attempt at writing a novel. The author is currently working on the novel full time, and he is hoping to complete it by the end of the year. The novel is tentatively titled "The Union Story."
CAB STIKE ITEMS

The Galley Slave Crew in the Kitchen Cabinet

North Palmer stood alone near the door, where their hat had been placed. An old street railroad ticket, with the name of the soldier written on it, was found on the floor of the cabin. He later revealed that he had sold his hat for a hundred dollars. When he was questioned further, he denied all knowledge of the soldier. He later admitted to the police that he had sold the hat for twenty dollars. A man later claimed to have seen him buy the hat from the soldier.

Brother "Harry" Bell was killed in the kitchen cabinet. He was shot by an armed group of men who entered the cabin. The police have not yet been able to identify the shooter.

Brother "Dave" Bass was also killed in the kitchen cabinet. A friend of his, who was standing close by, later claimed to have heard him call out for help. The police have not yet been able to identify the shooter.

At the scene of the crime, a group of men were seen standing outside the cabin. One of them later claimed to have seen a man with a gun enter the cabin. The police have not yet been able to identify the shooter.
