How Minneapolis Workers Are Housed

Occasionally a renter for advertising purposes builds a model home in Minneapolis. It has everything, but the buyer is so interested in the furniture that he never had in the way of furnishings. The house is completely electrified, scientifically ventilated and air conditioned, supplied with every comfort, at a cost of $25,000. This is a house that would be suitable for use as a summer home. It would cost about $20,000 to build something similar.
The Story of Bill Brown's Life and Work

A Humble Son of the Working Class, He Served it Nobly and Loyally

The story of Bill Brown's life parallels the development of the American labor movement. Born in Minnesota, he died in the state. It is the story of a man who, from humble beginnings, became a force for change throughout America.

Bill Brown was still a young man when he died. He was only forty-one. Bill was born May 1, 1887. At the time he was thirty-three years old, his life was the story of a man who had toiled in the sweat and toil of America's industries.

Bill's story is one of dedication and sacrifice. His life was marked by a commitment to the working class and to the labor movement. From his humble beginnings in Minnesota, he rose to become a respected leader in the labor movement.

Fifteen Years Ago

Bill Brown, a young man, was a member of the International Union of Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers. He was a steelworker and a union activist.

Bill's sons, Raymond and Richard, are also leaders in the labor movement. They continue their father's legacy of dedication and sacrifice.

Bill Speaking

Bill had two young sons—Raymond, age thirteen, and Richard, age seven. Bill was very proud of his boys. He often spoke of them in his speeches.

BLOODY LUDLOW, 1913

In September, 1913, some 9,000 miners with their families occupied the Ludlow, Colorado, shacks and established themselves in tent colonies, to conduct a strike against the coal operators there. The history of this strike, one of the most interesting of the civil wars of the twentieth century, was written by Albert Link in a book, "Ludlow: A Story of Labor and Liberty". The operators of the mines were encouraged to come to the United States in the general strike, and they brought a group of miners to Ludlow to protect their interests. The miners decided to drive the operators out of the town.

Branch Officers of Local B-292

The operators were elected from and by the miners of the two branches of the Ludlow strike. They were to be elected to the positions of branch president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer, and branch treasurer. The branch members were to be elected to the positions of branch executive board members, branch executive board president, branch executive board vice-president, branch executive board secretary, and branch executive board treasurer. The branch members were to be elected to the positions of branch executive board treasurer.

Independent Tramways

Local 75 of the Surface Tramway Drivers' Federation, under the leadership of George P. H. Snell, succeeded in establishing independent tramways. The operators of the mine were encouraged to come to the United States in the general strike, and they brought a group of miners to Ludlow to protect their interests.
North Central Drivers Mourn Bill Brown

He Was Leading Spirit in Organizing the Whole Area

Delegations from Many North Central Cities Attend funeral — They Mourn a Fallen Leader Who Belonged Not Only to Minneapolis But to Labor Everywhere — His Time and Effort Was Always There—North Central Drivers Are Ready to Call General Strike on Bill's Battle Flag.

By FARRELL DORES
Secretary, North Central District Council Drivers' Unions' mission to a score of cities throughout the North Central states went to Minneapolis on Saturday to pay tribute to Bill Brown, the organization's recent leader.

Among the drivers' unions whose representatives are members of the Minneapolis Teamsters Union are those of Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth, Grand Forks, North Dakota, and St. Cloud, Brainerd, Duluth, St. Paul, Austin, and Madison, Wisconsin, Oregon, Nebraska. These unions, as well as the white drivers whose organizations the North Central Council, became active ten years ago, were there to pay their respects to Bill Brown, the union leader who was killed in a recent auto accident.

Brown's leadership has been a matter of discussion and respect among the drivers throughout the United States, and his death has been mourned by his colleagues and associates in the transportation industry.

The friends and associates of Bill Brown were present at his funeral on Saturday, and the speeches were filled with fond memories of his contributions to the union and to the transportation industry.

Bill’s Last Picture

Forlorn, broken, Bill said to me the last morning at the prison, "I was never so broken before. I have been broken before, but never so broken before."

The Last Years

Like every life, slowly, silently, and dejectedly, Bill faced the coming of death. He was not afraid of death. He was afraid of the prison. He was afraid of being alone. He was afraid of being forgotten. He was afraid of being forgotten.

His last days were spent in a hospital bed. He was never allowed to go outside. He was never allowed to see anyone. He was never allowed to speak. He was never allowed to write. He was never allowed to do anything.

Bill was a Rebel

Bill was a Rebel, as are all true Americans. He rejected the false values of society. He rejected the lies of authority. He rejected the corrupting influence of power. He rejected the false promises of wealth and status.
