County FLP Hands Unions Short End

With its chief task that of allotting the county's 85 seats in the state legislature, the Humboldt County Farm Bureau Association held its 85th annual convention last Sunday, December 19th, in the downtown Kearsney Hall. The gathering had no sooner opened at 10 a.m. than a floor fight broke out on the whole vital question of trade-union representation for the Farm Bureau's members.

As is well known, the members of the local unions have been the backbone of the Farm Bureau and to a certain extent of the Farm Bureau Federation. The members of the local union are the backbone of the county Farm Bureau, and the members of the Farm Bureau Federation are the backbone of the State Farm Bureau. The local unions have a voice in the affairs of the local Farm Bureau, and the State Farm Bureau has a voice in the affairs of the Farm Bureau Federation.

In the past, the Farm Bureau has been a strong advocate of the interests of the local unions, and has been an active member in the affairs of the local unions. The Farm Bureau has been a strong advocate of the interests of the State Farm Bureau, and has been an active member in the affairs of the State Farm Bureau. When You Mention Omaha, Mention This!
There's a lot of tremendous irony in the December 17th editorial in the Minnesota Star implying praise for the city of Omaha because it is an "acclimated city," with its own motive for being so. In fact, it seems to me that such motives are more transportable to the city of Omaha as a whole.

The Musica Brothers, the Fink Suit, and Business Secrets
The Musica Brothers had been getting along fine in Big Business for nearly a year. Yet, they've suddenly become the talk of the town. One reason is their recent success in solving some real problems and putting the hammer down on some false ideas. The other is the growing recognition of their abilities to think creatively and solve complex problems.

Reading every single event that has taken place during this past week, we cannot help but see a new aspect of the world that has emerged. This world is one of great change and complexity, where the old ways are no longer enough to comprehend the new forces at work. We must adapt to these forces, or we will be left behind.

Hears Larson On Council
The Minnesota Federation of the National Farmers' Union has already come forth and told the people of the state that they are united against the status quo and the Musica movement.

It is wonderful, dear Big Business apologists, that Big Business is in such a sorry state, so that all of us that have a real stake in the stability of the economy are being called to the aid of the nation.
