MINNEAPOLIS OFFICE: 357 PLYMOUTH AVE. N.

On a cold day last Thursday, the three Minneapolis children were in a hospital. They were being treated for rubella, or German measles, and their mother was afraid they would die.

The children, 10-year-old Mildred, 6-year-old Doris, and 3-year-old John, all attended the same kindergarten. Their mother, Mrs. Marie Stassen, was afraid they would die.

The following letter, interesting for its description of the state of the union movement in the deep South, was written to this newspaper by one of our readers. We pass it on in its entirety:

Friend Describes Unionism in Southern Section of U.S.

The writer of this article is in a position to know the facts and figures of the situation in the South. He has been in the South for some time and has been active in the union movement. His knowledge of the situation is based on personal observation and experience.

The writer states that the union movement in the South is in a state of stagnation. The reason for this is the lack of organization and leadership. The Southern workers are not yet ready to organize and fight for their rights. The Southern labor unions are not as strong as those in the North. The Southern workers are not as organized and do not have the same amount of power.

The writer also states that the Southern labor movement is not as active as in the North. The Southern workers are not as active in the strike movement. The Southern labor unions are not as strong as those in the North. The Southern workers are not as organized and do not have the same amount of power.

The writer concludes by saying that the situation in the South is not as bad as in the North, but it is still a problem. The Southern workers need to be organized and educated. The Southern labor unions need to be strengthened. The Southern workers need to be more active in the strike movement.

The Southern workers need to be more active in the strike movement.

Horrors of Relief Bared in Omaha

Omaha, Neb.—The unfortunates are starting to die in Omaha, Nebraska. It is estimated that four or five hundred per day are dying in the office to get certified, 'fainted dead away.' When they were revived, they were found suffering from hunger.

This is the part of the testimony of Mrs. Phylip Face of the relief agency in Omaha. Mrs. Face, who has been director of the Relief Agency in Omaha, Nebraska, presented March 23 to a refugee settlement in the city. She said that four or five hundred per day were dying in the office to get certified, 'fainted dead away.' When they were revived, they were found suffering from hunger.

"We have three or four thousand families in line waiting for food, line waiting for shelter, line waiting for clothing," Mrs. Face said.

The relief work in Omaha has been greatly handicapped by the lack of funds. The city has been unable to provide enough relief to meet the needs of the people. The relief agency has been forced to turn away many of the applicants for relief.

The situation is critical and urgent. The relief agency is doing everything possible to meet the needs of the people, but more funds are needed.

There was a minor dispute in the press a few days ago which indicated a certain drift in business along the railroad tracks. But it was just a matter of temporary fluctuations. The army, however, is preparing for a big move, and the railroad tracks are jumping with traffic.

There is a feeling in the air that something is going to happen. There is a feeling that the war is coming. And there is a feeling that the railroad tracks are going to be a key to the war.

The men and women who work on the railroad tracks are preparing for the war. They are working long hours and performing their duties with a sense of purpose.

There is a feeling of excitement and anticipation in the air. People are talking about the war and the changes that are coming.
