Bythelis, Arkansas—The sixth convention of the Southern Tenant Farmers’ Union, representing approximately 35,000 farm tenants and agricultural workers, was held in the Hotel of State in Little Rock last week. The delegation from the State of Arkansas, which is the most populous state in the union, was represented by the following members: R. Irwin Warren, president; A. P. Brown, secretary-treasurer; and P. A. Banister, editorial writer.

Concourse but ostensibly national in character, the convention was meeting for the first time in a decade. The convention made plans that the organization might be able to follow up the gains made in the last five years. The state-wide labor movement is the most powerful movement in the state today.
