On the National Pickle Line

Marvel School

A Government study which would be an important step toward pressuring the inner cities into action has been released. The study, ordered by the Federal Highway Administration, found that there are 31 million people in the nation's inner cities who do not have access to a bus or a car. The study also found that 17 million of these people live in neighborhoods with a density of 5,000 people per square mile or more.

WAGES

Dear Sir:

I am taking your union paper just to express my views in reference to the recent strike of the lumber workers in the northwestern lumber camps.

I have been working in that industry for many years and I believe that the strike was justified because the employers were trying to reduce wages and working conditions.

I am a member of the local union and I support the strike.

Sincerely yours,

D. J. Book

Labor Strike

The recent strike in the lumber camps of the northwestern United States was caused by the employers' attempt to reduce wages and working conditions. The strikers were demanding better pay and improved working conditions, which the employers were refusing to grant. The strike was supported by the union, and the strikers were successful in achieving their goals.

Gassing With 977

By Mike the Musketeer

"It’s a fact," said Mike the Musketeer, "people are gasping with 977.

"They say it’s because of the heat, but I believe it’s because of the gas.

"I’ve been working on the gas pumps all day, and I can tell you, there’s something in the air.

"People are tired, they’re exhausted, they’re gasping. And it’s not just the heat.

"It’s something in the air, something in the gas, something in the world."

In the end, Mike the Musketeer was right. It was indeed the gas, and people were indeed gasping. The truth was that they were breathing in a toxic gas that was causing them to feel dizzy and faint.

A DICTIONARY OF LABOR TERMS

Bosom Finaly Find Elmer a Job

Elmer was the best of men, an ordinary American, age 52, who had been laid off from his job. He was desperate to find something, anything, to keep him and his family together.

But what would Elmer do? He had no skills, no education, no experience. He was just a ordinary American, a man of few words, a man of few actions.

The bosses finally found Elmer a job, a job that would keep him and his family together. It was a job in the construction industry, a job that would keep him busy and make him feel useful.

Elmer worked hard, he worked long, he worked until he was exhausted. But he did it, he did it for his family, he did it for his kids.

And that's the story of Elmer, the ordinary American, the man who worked hard, who never gave up, who always tried his best.
