St. Louis Building Trades Wins with General Strike

You haven’t read about it in the youth press—but 15,000 union building trades workers in St. Louis have just ended a general strike with a magnificent victory.

The strike was called in protest against growing attacks against organized labor in the St. Louis area, which culminated October 25th in an armed attack by police on union members meeting at the Labor Temple. The strike was supported by the AFL-CIO and the ILGWU.

The St. Louis Building and Construction Trades Council, headed by John Church, answered the attack by calling a general strike. The strike was supported by the CIO and the Cardinal World.

Under the terms of the agreement, the union has secured a $5 per week increase in wages, a 10-hour workday, and recognition of union shop agreements.

California Bosses Use Test to Spot Troublemakers

California labor bosses have a new ploy to identify union organizers.

They have developed a psychological test that identifies troublemakers.

The test is administered to all new hires and those suspected of organizing activity.

The test consists of a series of questions designed to assess an individual's attitudes towards the union and the company.

The company uses the results to determine whether the individual is a potential troublemaker.

The test has been controversial, with unions arguing that it is a form of discrimination.

NORTHWEST ORGANIZER

Vol. 78 No. 1

Keeping the ideal of organized labor alive is the mission of the Northwest Organizer. For more than 100 years, the newspaper has been fighting for workers' rights and social justice.

The paper covers a wide range of topics, from labor issues to political events, aiming to provide a platform for voices that are often marginalized.

The Northwest Organizer is committed to delivering accurate, fact-based reporting to its readers, ensuring that important issues are brought to light.

In recent years, the rise of social media has presented new challenges and opportunities for the newspaper. The paper has adapted by expanding its online presence, offering readers access to its content anytime, anywhere.

NORTHEAST ORGANIZER

Vol. 76 No. 1

The Northeast Organizer is a long-standing publication dedicated to the advocacy of workers' rights. The paper emphasizes the importance of collective bargaining and fair labor practices.

Throughout its history, the newspaper has been at the forefront of labor movements, covering strikes, labor disputes, and legislative actions that shape the future of organized labor.

One of the key challenges faced by the Northeast Organizer is the rapid pace of technological change. The paper has responded by incorporating digital technologies to reach a broader audience.

As the years have passed, the Northeast Organizer has continued to evolve, maintaining its commitment to providing a voice for workers and their issues.
The End of the Road
For Labor's Traditional Political Policy

"Reward our Friends and Punish our Enemies." Almost fifty years ago, the old Grange passed a plan that has been a valuable part of our political life and an effective weapon in the hands of labor. But, it is time that we cease to keep this plan alive. It is not the right plan for day-to-day activities, and the present political situation makes it inadequate for the purpose. It is time that labor turned its attention to more important issues.

Keeping Step With 544
By Mickey Dunn

In the October 25th edition of the New York Times, we made the following statement: "Workers are not going to be satisfied with mere welfare provisions. They must have the right to vote. They must have the right to organize." This was true then, and it is true now. Workers are not content with mere welfare provisions. They want political power. They want the right to vote. They want the right to organize.

To All Trade Union Members

In every city workers are organizing. In every town they are setting up new local unions. In every state they are forming new state federations. The movement is national. It is a movement of the masses. It is a movement for the people.

Ray Wright On Labor Monday

Ray Wright, the leader of the Progressive Party, will speak at the Labor Monday meeting at the School of Commerce, 80 Fifth Avenue, at 8 p.m.

Local 259 News

From the earliest days of his career, Ray Wright has been a consistent advocate of the interests of the workers. He has been a leader in the struggle for the betterment of the working class. He has been a fighter for justice and equality.

Most of these women are experienced in needle trades but many are new to the trade and do not know the business. They need help from the union and from the leaders. They need guidance and support. They need the protection of the law.

The workers of the country who are called "sacred third" need protection as well as the other two parties. The workers need the protection of the law. They need the protection of the union. They need the protection of the labor movement.

The words "justice for all" are not just empty words. They need to be put into action. They need to be made real.
