Debs' Loyalty to His Imprisoned Comrades is a Superb Sacrifice

Debs: my making an individual fight for liberty while my comrades rot in jail!

Those were the words Debs spoke to his fellow Chicago daggers and workers at the Workers' Summer School in June 1919.

"Every instinct is against my making an individual fight for liberty while my comrades rot in jail!"

The Miners' Convention

The United Mine Workers' Convention has passed into its history; the result the delegates to the various state conferences have achieved will find much in the convention's acts of a disappointing nature, there being much dissatisfaction and protest from various quarters. This was the general sentiment among the delegates, who were assembled at the Convention of the Ohio State Convention, held in Cleveland, Ohio, on May 25th and 26th.

A large attendance of members and friends of the union was present, and the proceedings were marked by a spirit of harmony and conciliation. The convention was called to order by Henry C. Kennedy, president of the local union, and was conducted by the officers of the state convention.

Debs' The Magnificent

No more magnificent man has arisen out of the Debs' cause than the great political and commercial giant of the era. In his life, the struggle of the labor movement has been demonstrated. His name is synonymous with the cause of labor, and his memory will live on in the hearts of all who have followed him.

Debs has been a model for the labor movement. His ideas have been influential in the development of the movement, and his contributions have been invaluable. His life has been one of dedication and sacrifice, and his legacy will continue to inspire future generations of labor activists.

The convention was held in the beautiful city of Cleveland, Ohio, and was attended by a large number of delegates from various parts of the state. The program included speeches, debates, and discussions on a wide range of topics, including labor law, wages, and working conditions.
