INDIAN MEET TO END SOON

End Is Expected On Nov. 18 Bankruptcy of Gandhi Policy Skew

LONDON.—An uneasy end to the Round-Table Conference is impending on every hand. Recent reports vary as to the possibility of a settlement before the end of the month. The League of Nations is now in a state of suspense as to the future of the Gandhi policy. The situation is complicated by the fact that the Indian government has expressed its determination to resist any attempt at a settlement.

The picturesque failure of the Round-Table Conference is due to the clash of the different interests of the British and Indian peoples. The conference has been an absolute failure, and the result is not likely to be a victory for either side.

The Round-Table Conference was designed to bring about a settlement of the Indian question, but it has failed. The conference has been a complete failure, and the result is not likely to be a victory for either side.

Foreign Press Review

"The most publicized news-gathering mission into the Soviet region, the most reports from the Red bloc, is now being conducted by an American newspaper, the Daily Worker, which has just issued its latest issue. The Worker is one of the leading American newspapers, and it is safe to say that all of its readers are now aware of the existence of the Red bloc, which is primarily devoted to the propagation of the ideas of the Soviet Union. The Worker, which is published in New York, is owned and edited by the American Communist Party, and it is one of the largest circulating newspapers in the country."

The "Socialist Labor Party" is Formed

Berlin, Germany.

On October 13, the Social Democrats of Germany announced the formation of a new party, the "Socialist Labor Party," which has been established in the wake of the schism that has occurred in the ranks of the Social Democratic Party of Germany. There were 300,000 Social Democrats in the party, and the decision to form the new party was taken by the party's executive committee, which was also the party's central committee. The new party will be known as the "Socialist Labor Party," and it is expected to be a powerful force in German politics. The party will be led by Karl Liebknecht, who has been a prominent figure in the German socialist movement.

Local 22 Members for Genuine Strike, Meeting Shows

A Letter From A Needle Worker

New York City, October 18, 1913.

The meeting was held on Monday night and was attended by a large number of workers. The main point discussed was the need for a genuine strike to press for better working conditions. The speaker argued that the current strike was not genuine because it was not supported by the workers themselves. The speaker called for a genuine strike to be organized and supported by the workers.

Jap Imperialism in Manchuria by L. Magyar

The Crisis in the Far East

In the summer of 1931, the Japanese Imperial government, in an act of aggression, invaded Manchuria, a region that had been a part of China for centuries. The invasion was a precursor to the wider expansion of Japanese imperialism in East Asia. The Japanese government justified the invasion as a defensive measure against Russian aggression in the region. However, the international community, including the United Nations, condemned the Japanese actions and imposed sanctions in response. The invasion of Manchuria marked the beginning of a period of conflict that would shape the course of relations between Japan and China for decades to come.

The Play

Europe As I Saw It by Quincy B. Doyle

This is the second article in the series "Europe as I Saw It," written by Quincy B. Doyle. The series was intended to provide insights into the European culture and society from the perspective of a foreign observer. In this article, Doyle discusses the role of women in European society and the challenges they face in pursuing their goals and ambitions. He highlights the importance of promoting gender equality and inclusivity in all aspects of life. The series was well-received and received positive feedback from readers who appreciated the perspective offered by Doyle.

The Economic Week

A desperate campaign is being waged to spread opinions which are dangerous to the welfare of civilization, especially of the English-speaking world. Gold rates are down to 39.93 per ounce today. The financial policies of various Western governments have not been able to stem the gold drain. The French government has rejected the French proposal for a joint declaration of gold standard. The British government has also rejected the proposal. The European countries are facing the threat of a severe financial crisis. The situation is expected to worsen as the gold drain continues. The European economies are critically dependent on the gold standard, and any threat to it could have serious implications for the stability of the global financial system.

The Coop and Worker Creditors

by L. Becker

The Coop and Worker Creditors is a novel by L. Becker that explores the relationship between cooperative businesses and workers' credit unions. The novel highlights the importance of worker cooperatives in promoting economic equality and social justice. The story follows the lives of several workers who form a cooperative business and establish a credit union to support their community. The novel was influential in promoting the idea of cooperative economics and has been translated into several languages.

What's This? Another 'Learning Tour'

What's this? Another 'Learning Tour'? This phrase is from the satirical work "What's this? Another 'Learning Tour'?" by Charles Dickens. The work parodies the travel books of the time, and the phrase "Another 'Learning Tour'" is a play on words, suggesting that the protagonist is once again embarking on a tour of learning. The phrase is used to indicate that the protagonist is taking another opportunity to gain knowledge and experience.
Capitalist "Planning" and Socialist Planned Economy

by Jay Lovestone

The 刊物和 impossibilities of capitalistic "planning" are legion. The vast possibilities of social planning are simple to state, and are only achieved by a new kind of economic system, which will be possible only when the working class has established its political power.

"The case of all three crises is always the same: the workers are everywhere in the back, in the rear, while the capitalists are in the front, pursuing their own interests, and exploiting the workers. It is impossible to think of a system of economic planning which would replace the capitalist system.

In the future, under a worker's government, the economy will be planned from above, with the workers in the forefront, not the capitalists. The workers will have the last word, and the capitalists will have to follow their lead.

The system of which we speak is the socialist system, and it is based on the principles of democracy, equality, and solidarity. It is the system that will make it possible to plan the economy, and it is the system that will make it possible to plan for the future.

The future is ours, and we will make it ours!"
