

LEONARD D. ABBOTT SPEAKS ON THE TRUSTS

Leonard D. Abbott spoke at the annual meeting of thetrusts on March 15, before the Brooklyn Co-operation Union, in a speech that portrayed the trusts as the nation’s most powerful economic force.

The spirit of competition and hard work, which is the basis of successful movement, is being stifled by the influence of the trusts. The trusts have been using their vast resources to promote the idea that competition is bad for business, and they have managed to persuade the public that trusts are necessary for economic growth.

We are in the midst of a great social and political revolution. The trusts are using their immense power to influence public opinion and to control the political process. We must resist this threat to our democratic system.

The trusts are not our friends. They are our enemies. We must stand together to defend our economic and political freedoms. Together, we can create a better future for all Americans.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD

David Brownlow of New York is one of the recent valuable acquisitions to the Social Democrats, and his new article, "The Socialist Laborer," is a splendid example of the work of the party. He has been in Chicago for some time, and his articles have appeared in the Social Democrat, Chicago Daily Times, and other papers.

The Social Democrat has also been active in organizing the Laborites in various parts of the city. The organization has been very successful, and is now making rapid progress. The weekly paper, "The Socialist Laber," is being published in Chicago, and is doing excellent work.

PRINCIPLES AND PERSONS

ANOTHER SERMON

If our parsons are going to quit sermon- izing, it is because we will have to quit to politics and take service in the same way as power. I do not threaten to do it myself, because I am not at all certain that the service to which I owe is the only one that they wish to perform. The attempt has already brought forth some good fruit, and the attempt is called for by the state of society.

In that sense I pointed out the dangers and tendencies of the church and its constitutions and not of personalities. Of my belief, I can only say that we can scarcely see the Church of England, in which the influence of individual character, in the face of the political problem, is not only very difficult to attach so much importance to the personal development of the individual, and so little to the work of the Church. We solve this great social movement in which the individual and the Church are not the principal, but instead, as it were, the subject matter of it. In other words, the particular individual or set of individuals who make up the Church, as an abstraction in the sense of the person of Mr. John Smith, are the subject matter of the Church. This is true of all the world. But instead of our focusing our attention on the person of Mr. John Smith, we shall focus our attention on the subject matter of the Church, in the sense of a social movement. It is true of all the world. We shall focus our attention on the subject matter of the Church, in the sense of a social movement.

Whether there is no danger in that he'll be brighter. We have but one duty for the moment.

Let some of the love, the justice, the charity, the grace, the mercy, the forgiveness, that comes down from our lips into our lives and into the world. That is the work of the Church. That is the work of the Church.
