A Remarkable Address.

By Father O'Reilly.

The following is an account of an address given by Father O'Reilly, a prominent Irish-American priest, at a conference on labor relations in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. The address was delivered to a large audience of workers and union leaders and was widely reported in the local press. The text includes excerpts from Father O'Reilly's speech, highlighting his views on the importance of union organizing and the role of the Catholic Church in supporting workers' rights. The address was delivered at a time when labor relations were becoming increasingly contentious, with strikes and other forms of worker protest becoming more common.
