The Class Struggle.

The following is the story of the workers' struggle for fair wages and working conditions, as told by a worker from the textile industry.

"The bosses are always trying to cut our wages, but we refuse to accept their demands. We have already worked without pay for two weeks and we won't give in."

The struggle continues and the workers remain determined to fight for their rights.

According to the Worker's Union, the average weekly wage in the textile industry is $10.00, but the workers are demanding $15.00.

The following sentences are from a speech given by a union leader at a rally.

"We will not accept anything less than $15.00 per week. We will continue to fight until we get what we deserve."

The rally ends with a chant of "Union, Union, Union!" as the workers march back to their factory.
The May ball of the Raleigh Ward was held on Saturday evening. The program was given with the usual state of festivity and gaiety. A world’s gaiest party, as the program was described. The ballroom was crowded with fashionable people. The orchestra played a fine selection of music and the lady guests were arrayed in lovely gowns. The handsomest array of ladies was probably ever seen on the occasion of an entertainment of this kind. The guests were entertained with some refreshments and then the ball was opened. The dance was a great success and the guests were highly pleased with the arrangements. The After-Meeting was a great success.
