Not Afraid Of Present Problems!

WHILE FIGHTING FOR THE ABOLITION OF CAPITALISM, THE PEOPLE'S INTERESTS MUST BE SAFEGUARDED. The following manifesto (slightly altered) to the voters of Germany was published by the German Social Democratic party...

As Pope Leo on his death bed turned over his personal belongings, amounting to a few millions of dollars, etc., to his successor, whoever he may be, it would seem as if the days of capitalist popes and attacks on the people's desire for Socialism are not yet past.

Herbert Casson, who cuts his manuscript according to his job, is announced to contribute an article on "Honest Labor Leaders," to a forthcoming issue of Boyce's Weekly-or the Decoy Weekly, as a Western exchange aptly puts it...

CHATTERING CHAUNCEY CHALLENGED. Eugene V. Debs sticks his scalpel into the Foxy New Yorker, and gives it a turn or two. - As to Slot Machines and Business. CHAUNCEY DEPEW, OF THE NEW YORK CENTRAL, has been interviewed at Chicago. Hear him:

The ministers in these parts are all stirred up about the "slot machine" and are massing all their herculean powers to wipe out the evil. What a tremendous moral energy it requires to attack this pimple on the bloated epidermis of the capitalist system!

LABOR GAMES.

The Women's Union Label league, which is composed of female unionists and the wives and daughters of union workmen, organized for the prime purpose of promoting the sale of union made goods...

"I promise on my honor to buy union label goods as far as possible and to patronize merchants selling union label merchandise and to promote the sale of the same by assisting those firms who sell union label products and employ union clerks."

It is the purpose of the league, it is learned, to circulate the form of obligation by members and others interested for signatures of those who are in sympathy with the aims of the organization.—Washington Star.

The strongest argument against the employment of children under ten years of age in factories is plainly the physical argument, thinks the Washington Times. No child compelled to labor many hours a day in a monotonous routine of toil can escape the consequences such as tend to the stunting and weakening of the race.

In the report of a railroad wreck last week one of the unknown dead was described as "evidently a laborer." His station in life was doubtless determined by the clothes he wore.

Dun's "index number" of the cost of living for June 1 was $98.938 as compared with $98.561 on May 1. The number is an arbitrary one made up of the prices of breadstuffs, meats, dairy and garden products, clothing, metals and other articles about in their usual proportion to consumption.

THE PROSPERITY-MAKERS; OR, THE TRAGEDY OF A MUSHROOM TOWN.

BY A WELL-KNOWN WRITER.

CHAPTER XVII.—In which the climax of the man hunt is reached and Philip explodes a bomb in Allacoochee's capillary heart.

"What have you done?" she asked.

As not infrequently happens when the probable course of events has been carefully prefigured, nothing came about during the evening to verify Protheroe's fears or to add to Thorndyke's misery.

And neither that night nor the next morning before they left for Allacoochee did either of the young men find an opportunity for private speech with the girl; though Thorndyke abused himself, as was his wont, for not having made one, and Protheroe went away leaden-hearted because he had denied the privilege of confession and absolution.

As to the necessity for going, Thorndyke was peremptory and obdurate. He insisted that Sharpless must not be given another day; that there had already been sufficient delay to enable the crafty and unscrupulous attorney to entrench himself behind mountains of chicanery.

"I wouldn't be too precise about the exact sum, Master Thorndyke," was Duncan's parting injunction. "Peetty thousand dollars is a fearful deal of money to ding out at one clatter."

"I've been thinking that over since we spoke of it," rejoined Philip, "and I've changed my mind. They'll pay a hundred thousand, or go to jail."

Protheroe laughed heartily at Duncan's dumb show of amazement when they were out of hearing. "I hope you'll win," he said. "Do you want me to go with you?"

"No; I fancy I can manage them better alone; but I'm much obliged. I'd be glad to have you with me afterward, though. I imagine Sharpless will be in an assaunting mood if I do win."

Allacoochee the wonderful was never more alive to the fact of its own importance and prosperity than on a certain day in September which had been set apart and marked with a red letter on the herald of a new epoch in the history of the city.

Philip ignored the proffered civility and went brusquely to the point. "I didn't come here to measure polite phrases with either of you, as you probably know. I am here as the legal representative of John Kilgrow, upon whose farm you have taken the liberty to build a city."

The smile of welcome on the lawyer's face disappeared as quickly as it had come, and the thin figure of the manager seemed to shrink into a still smaller compass.

"You'll have to be more explicit, Mr. Thorndyke," said Sharpless, tilting easily in his chair. "And I will be, simply to show you what I am prepared to prove. On the 9th of February in the present year you purchased of James Cates a tract of land which you had good reason to suspect was stolen from John Kilgrow."

"Possibly, but it has the merit of truth." "That is a harsh word, Mr. Thorndyke." "Possibly, but it has the merit of truth."

"Are you prepared to act for your client in this matter?" "I am his attorney in fact."

"I will execute a quit-claim on the part of my client, and I will surrender the forged deed, upon the payment of $100,000 in cash or 'in bankable funds.'"

Sharpless sprang to his feet with an oath, and Fench had almost reached the door when Philip stopped him. "Don't go just yet, Mr. Fench; there's an officer in the corridor, and he has his instructions."

The manager crept back to his chair again, and Sharpless sat down. "That was a good joke of yours, Mr. Thorndyke," he said, with an unpleasant smile. "Of course you know that the original value of the land was next to nothing."

"I don't care to argue that point or any other. The question between me is simply this: will you pay me $100,000, or shall I give you in charge for forgery?"

weapon, Mr. Sharpless," he said, quietly, "and you will agree with me that when it becomes necessary to employ it, hesitation is not to be too strongly deprecated. I'll trouble you to close that drawer."

In the duel of words Sharpless had been reflectively measuring the distance between himself and the coat-pocket into which Philip had slipped his hand at the beginning of the interview. The deductions were evidently upon the side of prudence, for he shut the drawer with a snap and turned away from the desk.

"Going back to the original question—your demand is unreasonable; and if it were not, there is not such an amount as you name in all the banks in the city."

"Probably not; and, in any event, I should prefer your draft on New York, secured by a mortgage on all the property of the company in Chilmark county."

"Oh, you would?" Sharpless was losing his self-control. "Perhaps you think I own the property in fee simple. You ought to know, if you know anything at all, that I should have to submit the matter to our New York officers."

Knowing that he had the sword in, Philip could not refrain from twisting it a little in the wound. "From my point of view, that would seem to be the last thing you'd care to do. You could scarcely afford to give the facts in the case, you know, and I don't see how anything else would answer. However, that is all beside the mark. I know that you have the authority to sign papers and to transfer property"—he looked at his watch—"my time is limited, gentlemen; which is it to be, an amicable settlement—or let us not mince matters—the chain gang?"

For the first time during the interview Fench roused himself to speak. "For God's sake, Sharpless, don't trifle with him; give him what he wants!"

None the less, Sharpless fought desperately, contesting every inch of ground. It would take time to draw up the papers; he must at least be allowed to telegraph New York; he had no idea that his draft would be honored without explanations. To all of which Philip turned a deaf ear and pointed inexorably to the alternative. He must have the draft and the security, or the law should be allowed to take its course. When it finally came down to a mere question of the time required for the preparation of the papers, Philip produced a draft and mortgage ready for signature, together with a quit-claim deed signed by himself as attorney in fact for John Kilgrow.

"You have a notary within call," he said; "have him come in and witness your signatures."

The manager's clerk was summoned, and when Fench had written his name with trembling fingers under the scrawling signature of the attorney, the clerk filled out the attestation, and the mortgage and the draft were handed to Thorndyke. Sharpless dismissed the young man curtly when his duty was performed and turned irascibly upon his successful opponent.

toiling Philip's courage and perseverance quite as honestly as any of the others. When the excitement had a little subsided, Philip asked how K'Grou could best be reached. Duncan wanted to climb the mountain himself, but his wife objected.

"It'll just be flyin' in the face o' Providence, w' your rheumatics, Jamie, and that'll no do, whatever," she said; and when Protheroe offered to go, a fresh difficulty arose.

"Ye wouldn't find auld Johnnie in a month o' Sundays, Robbie, lad. Dinna ye ken he's hid awa' frae Sharpless an' his gang?"

Then Elsie came to the rescue, and Duncan demurred again. "I'm no that free to let ye go, bein' the Lord on'y knows how many o' Sharpless' cut-throats ye might be fallin' in wi'!"

All of which pointed to an obvious conclusion. Before Protheroe could finally determine whether to be glad or sorry, he found himself helping Elsie up the path on John's mountain. With the unlimited opportunity for free speech his confession stuck fast in his throat. At first Elsie was too joyous; no man in his sober senses could plead his cause before a judge whose ebullient happiness overflowed all the approaches to seriousness. And afterward, when his taciturnity had dampened Elsie's enthusiasm, the difficulties were increased rather than diminished.

After a time they stood together upon the brink of the Pocket, and Protheroe realized that it was then or never; in a few minutes they would be with the old mountaineer.

"Wait a minute, please," he said, as Elsie was about to lead the way to the path down the cliff.

She stopped obediently, and the fear that delay would bring more irresolution told him how quickly he was to tell you how sorry I am for what I did the other day; I know it was excusable, but I have done what I should atone for it."

"What have you done?" she asked. "It isn't much, I know; but I kept my promise—I brought him back to you."

"Mr. Thorndyke, you mean?" "Yes." "I'm sure I'm much obliged; it was awfully good of you."

"She was standing at the verge of the cliff, clinging to a small tree growing out of a crevice in the rock, and looking down into the billows of foliage below."

"What have you done?" she asked. "It isn't much, I know; but I kept my promise—I brought him back to you."

"Mr. Thorndyke, you mean?" "Yes." "I'm sure I'm much obliged; it was awfully good of you."

She turned still further from him, and he made an involuntary step toward her when she leaned over the edge of the rock. Then he saw that she was shaking with suppressed laughter, and penitence very nearly became wrath.

"Why are you laughing at me?" she demanded. "Because you're so ridiculous," she retorted, facing him suddenly. "What makes you talk as if Mr. Thorndyke belonged to me? What right have you to think that he is anything more than a friend of my father's, like—like yourself? How do you know that he isn't engaged to the young lady in New York who writes to him every week?"

Protheroe made a pained effort to be coherent, but it ended rather tamely. "Then you—then I have been mistaken all along in thinking—Elsie, please come away from the cliff and tell me you forgive me."

FOUR BOOKS IN 1 VOLUME.

- I. SEX AND LIFE. The Mystery of Nature and the Glory of Creation. II. TOKOLOGY. Physiology and Hygiene of the Sexual Organization. The Woman's Book of Health and Beauty. III. CHILD-CULTURE. Education and Character-Building. The Kindergarten and Manual Training. IV. HEALTH AND HYGIENE. Practical Lessons from a Common-Sense School of Medical Science. The Prevention and Cure of Disease by Natural Remedies.

IT TEACHES:

That poisons are not remedies. That symptoms and pains are not the disease, but only the messengers bringing warning of the disease to the brain; that to silence the messengers and leave the disease unchecked is folly. That prevention is better than cure; that the great elements of prevention are: knowledge of self; cleanliness, physical as well as moral and mental; hygiene and sanitation. That mind and thought have their influence on bodily health no less than physical and material conditions. A healthy body needs a healthy mind, and a healthy mind makes a healthy body. Dr. Greer's book treats of all the topics and theories connected with the health of mind and body. "Investigate all things; hold on to that which is good," is the author's motto. Follow the teachings of wise Mother Nature. The chapters on Child-culture and Education are sure to have a beneficial effect on the well-being of future generations, and the earnest warnings against unnecessary surgical operations add not a little to the value of a volume which can work only good to those who follow its teachings.

The Joy of Life Under the Capitalist System!

What is the Fate of the Average Citizen But an Anxious Living, Long Days of Monotonous Drudgery, and an Old Age of Pain and Beggary?

This is necessary, under capitalism, in order that the few may swell up with riches they do not produce. Earth for them is a PARADISE; for the workers it is a HELL, which they prolong by voting against the interests of their class.

What International Socialism Demands:

- 1. Collective ownership of public utilities and all industries in the hands of Trusts and Combines. 2. Democratic management of such collective industry. 3. Reduction of the hours of labor and progressively increased remuneration. 4. State and National Insurance for the workers and honorable rest for old age. 5. The inauguration of public industries to safeguard the workers against lack of employment. 6. Education of ALL children up to the age of 18 years. No child labor. 7. Equal political and civil rights for men and women.

If you believe in the above vote with the Social Democrats.

Let Labor put its own House in Order.

The capitalist press is making a good deal of noise over the case of the New York walking delegate who is alleged to have been caught red-handed in selling out a strike and who is said to have also a long record of bribe soliciting from the employers of labor likely to be effected by strikes.

Such shameless traducers of labor as the comic weekly, Puck, and the long list of capitalist daily mouthpieces in the larger cities, are all filling space in general denunciation of the walking delegate and making use of the New York incident to prejudice the public against the methods of unionism in carrying on its necessary warfare on behalf of the toilers. Puck prints a big cartoon showing a police court with Dist. Atty. Jerome on the judge's bench and the walking delegate before him, and Jerome saying that he wished he had the power to send him up for life, or words to that effect.

And now, in the face of the storm breaking over this particular laborer's head, his organization has reelected him to the walking delegateship, and this will stir up the capitalist yelpers afresh.

Capitalism, through its press, seems bent on doing labor the favor of cleaning its house for it. But this is the sheerest hypocrisy. It will be against capitalist interests when labor gets a clean house. Capitalism, especially capitalism in politics, has always been a ready purchaser of the corrupt "representative" of labor. Its purpose now is not really to drive the genus labor fakir out of business, but simply to give organized labor a black eye with a view to being able to handle it the better in the future. This is the class interest, the instinctive class purpose that dominates its conduct in this instance.

But labor can well profit from the incident. Is there any good reason why the labor movement should not be clean? Can any self-respecting, sincere believer in labor solidarity afford to be identified with the labor movement and not protest to the extent of his powers against certain things that do exist in the movement and which to some extent place a stain upon him as well as all other members?

The labor fakir sells out his brethren. He makes game of them. He is an unspeakably miserable type of criminal, whom only men who like to be cheated and sold out can wish to tolerate. We who are trade unionists know that the labor fakir does exist, and that in some localities he carries the labor movement in the hollow of his hand. If we keep silence we are simply parties of his loathsome practices. We are as criminal as he is.

It is hardly necessary to mention concrete cases here, and yet a case or two may not be out of place. Take the city of Chicago, where the labor movement has reached a high state of organization; is the strength of labor there improved by the fact that recognized labor leaders are holding political jobs from the city, given them because of their supposed delivery of labor votes to the capitalist politicians in recurring elections? And these black sheep of labor are given positions of honor by the Chicago Federation of Labor, which only enables them to ply their trade of selling out their class the better. Can such a condition of things be defended by the members of that organization?

Organized labor, if it expects to accomplish anything must keep its own household clean. By speaking of Chicago, we do not wish to be understood as claiming that that city presents the only shameful example. We are quite sure that our readers in other cities will know of like cases.

We must not forget to add this word, however: That there has been a sort of housecleaning process going on for some time in the labor movement. This has been made possible by the influx of Socialists or the conversion of former members to Socialism, thus strengthening the hands of those among the trade unionists who had long wished to clean matters up. And this is one reason, and a very powerful one, why a certain type of trade unionists hate the Socialists.

Let the battle of integrity and self-respect against the "grifters" continue and increase in strength. It is important; nay, it is imperative!

Andy Carnegie says "Every workman a shareholder" would end most of the conflicts which sadden us between capital and labor. You're right there, Andy. Every workman a shareholder in the profits and every capitalist a shareholder in the "right to work" and the trouble between capital and labor would be at an end.—A. L. U. Journal.

Capitalistic "Reformer" Jerome.—We do not know whether the charges made against some of the Business Agents of the unions are true or false. We may suppose that there are some rascals in the ranks of these unions. IT WOULD BE A WONDER IF SOME OF THEM DID NOT IMITATE THE EXAMPLE OF SYSTEMATIC DISHONESTY CONSTANTLY SET THEM BY THEIR RESPECTABLE EMPLOYERS.

But we know, too, that the truth of the charges is not yet proven. We observe that the capitalist press and all the critics of the labor movement assume these union officers to be guilty unless they can prove their innocence. And we observe that District Attorney Jerome, respectable capitalist "reformer" that he is, who claims to have known of these corrupt practices for many months past, HAS CHOSEN TO PROSECUTE THEM JUST AT THE MOMENT WHEN THE PROSECUTION WOULD DO THE MOST FOR THE SERVICE OF THE LOCKOUT BOSSES.—The Worker.

SOCIALIST TRIUMPH IN GERMANY At the recent German elections the Socialists have won a victory too notable to be concealed by the capitalist papers of the United States. They therefore claim that socialism in Germany is sweeping different from socialism in America; that it is merely a democratic reform movement, as such it will be met by reading THE SOCIAL REVOLUTION, by Karl Kautsky, the leading socialist writer of Germany. Translated by A. M. and Rev. Wood Simons. Cloth, 150 pages, 50 cents, postpaid. Mention this name and we will include without extra charge a copy of the Socialist Review. C. P. Address: CHARLES H. HALF HOURS IN THE HERALD SANCTUM.

The following letter from Comrade Carl D. Thompson gives us a glimpse of a regrettable state of affairs in Nebraska where phrase-mongering (which is far from being true class-consciousness) seems to be running riot. However, if some facts that have come to this office are true, it would almost seem as if this fanaticism on the part of the regular organization had its mission to perform: that of entirely and relentlessly exterminating the Khazars snake and its progeny from the movement. As to trying to keep the movement in agricultural Nebraska an industrial workers' movement, that is certainly unscientific and asinine.

Dear Herald: The Nebraska state convention met at Omaha July 4th. The state committee met in the afternoon and did most of the work of the convention. An application was received from Maynard, Frontier Co. for a charter. It was signed by seven business men and one school teacher. The application was refused on the ground that the applicants were not "wage-earners."

Later an amendment was made to the constitution that hereafter no charter should be granted to a local unless at least 80 per cent of the signers were wage-earners and that all locals in the state now organized shall be brought to that position as soon as possible. I attempted to oppose this amendment, but was interrupted, denounced and hissed. It seems to me it is absurd narrowness. And in the state of Nebraska where there are very few wage-earners in comparison, and where there is a strongly revolutionary element among the agricultural classes, to refuse them admission is nothing but fanaticism. By such tactics as this the Nebraska Socialists are destroying themselves and forcing their natural allies into an independent movement at the very moment they are seeking admission to the Socialist movement.

And the spirit of the Omaha comrades does not show itself alone in this matter. They resort to regular S. L. P. tactics. Most of their time is spent in fighting Socialists.

While at the headquarters a letter was received from J. Edward Morgan, formerly state secretary and organizer of Nebraska. He is now at work in Denver, Colo. He writes that the movement there is almost entirely middle class and must therefore be entirely uprooted. He is at that task now and assures us that he is quite equal to it. The Omaha local recently passed a resolution declaring that there are only two papers in English in the United States that are working for the interests of the Socialist party—viz. the "Seattle Socialist" and the "New York Worker." The extreme tactics at Omaha not only excludes farmers and small merchants, but for one reason or another has driven over 90 members, mostly wage workers, out of the local. These of course keep on working for Socialism. They have organized a Socialist Propaganda Club. The convention nominated three state officers and passed some resolutions and went to a picnic the next day.

Dear Herald—Herewith please find 25 cts. in stamps, for which please send me the Social Democratic Herald for six months starting with 253 to address below. Comrades J. H. Backus and C. B. Glover speak for Socialism on court house square every Saturday evening at 5 P. M. All are invited, especially the ladies. Good attendance.—Congressman Thos. H. Ball of this, the Eight district of Texas, has resigned to take effect about November 1st. No doubt we will have a candidate out for this place in the proper time.

June 26. (Postscript)—The meeting was a big success, BUT was not mentioned by the newspapers! The hall was filled and many women were present who took much interest in everything. There were several converts, one colored, who was very enthusiastic and wants to work in his own race for Socialism. Dear Comrades: Please send me the Herald for six months for the enclosed 25 cts. A ten weeks trip fixed me so that I am uneasy without the paper. I am a country editor in a town of 700 people. Run the paper and job office for a living, and make Socialist speeches and circulate literature for glory. I am the only genuine and irreplaceable Lewis. But send the Herald. Its tone is all right. REDUCED RAILROAD RATES FOR THE PICNIC. A FARE AND ONE-THIRD FOR THE ROUND TRIP on all roads from all points in Wisconsin where the going rate to Milwaukee is $3.00 or less, has been secured for the Monster Picnic of the Social Democratic Party of Wisconsin, to be held at Schlitz Park, Sunday, July 19th, 1903. Tickets will be sold on July 18th and 19th, good to return leaving Milwaukee until and including July 20th, 1903. Tickets limited for going passage commencing date of sale and for continuous passage in each direction. CONCERT, GAMES AND BALL IN THE EVENING. ADMISSION 10 CENTS, TO BALL 25 CENTS. DON'T MISS EUGENE V. DEBS' GREAT ADDRESS!

Not a single reader should fail to attend. It will be a memorable demonstration -- one which you will be proud of having attended your life-long. Hundreds of Comrades from every part of Wisconsin are coming. And why not? It is run for the benefit of the Social Democratic Herald and the State Campaign Fund. It is not a local but a State Picnic. Part of the proceeds will go to meet the State Campaign debt of the last election. By the way, that reminds us of the tickets sent you. Have you paid for yours? Many Comrades have. Why not do your duty and sent in the money now, even if you haven't sold all the tickets. Let every one give the Monster a boost.
