WHY THE FEW ARE RICH AND THE MANY POOR.

By Allan L. Benson

The capitalist system has been called the "system of economic slavery," and it is generally agreed that a few have become rich while the many have become poor. But few have examined the system closely enough to understand why this is so. Let us do this now.

The basic problem is that the capitalist system is based on private ownership of the means of production. The means of production include land, factories, tools, and raw materials. These are owned by individuals or corporations, not by the community as a whole.

Under this system, individuals or corporations who own the means of production control the economy. They dictate what is produced, how it is produced, and how much is produced. They can control prices and wages, and they can even control the amount of goods people can buy.

The system is based on the idea that the rich have the right to keep what they have, and the poor have the right to work for what they can get. But this is a false assumption, because the rich are not necessarily the people who work hardest or are most productive.

The system also requires that people work for money, which is not a natural state of affairs. People should be able to work for what they need, not for what they can get.

The system is also based on the idea that the rich are entitled to keep what they earn. But this is also false, because the rich are not necessarily the people who earn the most.

The system requires that people be willing to sacrifice their needs and desires for the sake of the economy, which is not a natural state of affairs. People should be able to have what they need, not what they can get.

The system also requires that people be willing to work for what they can get, which is not a natural state of affairs. People should be able to have what they need, not what they can get.

Bonnie Heights, Wis., Oct. 6.-The Milwaukee Sentinel says:

"Some Wisconsin Election Comments by the Press.

For the old party press of Wisconsin and the state editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel were made to write the country 110 years ago, the former among the sessions of the legislature. These were the days when newspapers were more powerful than today, and the state editor was a figure of some importance. The Sentinel was one of the leading newspapers of the state, and its editor was known as a fierce advocate of the Democratic party. The Sentinel's editor, who was a man of considerable influence, was a frequent visitor at the state capital. He was known as a fiery partisan, and his editorials were often filled with strong language and personal attacks. The Sentinel was not afraid to speak out, and its editorials were often criticized by its political opponents. The Sentinel was a powerful influence in the state, and its editor was respected by many. The Sentinel's editor was a man of strong character, and his editorials were often read with interest by the people of the state. The Sentinel is a reminder of the power of newspapers in the past, and a reminder of the importance of a free press. The Sentinel's editor was a man of strong character, and his editorials were often read with interest by the people of the state.
