HOW WILL SOCIALISM COME?

Victor L. Berger Writes of the Transition Period

Socialism is no more an epoch of civilization—the end of one and the beginning of another—in the broad sense in which the word is used. It is not even a single period, as some people would have you believe. It is a process, a gradual development, a series of stages, each of which is marked by certain distinct characteristics.

The Social Democratic party is the outgrowth of this process, and it seeks to speed it up by active work and organization. It believes in the inevitability of the coming of socialism, but it also believes in the necessity of the gradualist method, which means the gradual development of the forces of production, the growth of the class-consciousness of the workers, and the intelligent and active participation of the masses in the shaping of the future.

Our party is not a group of utopian dreamers who believe that the world can be changed overnight by a few heroic acts. We believe in the slow, steady, and patient work of organizing and educating the masses, of bringing about a gradual transition from capitalism to socialism.

The Social Democratic party is therefore not a revolutionary party, but a reformative party, seeking to bring about the gradual transformation of society through the agency of the masses, and not through the agency of a small group of leaders.

Socialism will come, but it will come slowly, and it will come through the gradual development of the forces of production, the growth of the class-consciousness of the workers, and the intelligent and active participation of the masses in the shaping of the future.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

A public utility in the hands of a private corporation is an incentive to the pursuit of growing profits for the owners of the company at the expense of the community. It is the principle of the service, the reason it is needed, the public interest that is served on the capital account.

This system cannot be abandoned. It must be replaced. The problem of public service is a question of public ownership and public control.

The solution lies in the hands of the people. They must be made aware of the facts and they must be given the power to act.

What International Socialism Demands:

1. Ownership of all land in the hands of the community for collective, not individual, use.
2. Ownership of all productive industries, big and small, by the community.
3. Distribution of the fruits of human labor and productive activities among all the people.
4. Social and National Insurance for the workers and industrial classes.
5. The reorganization of public industries to safeguard the workers.
6. Abolition of all forms of child labor.

If you believe in the above social doctrines, you are a Socialist.

EDITORIAL ETCHINGS.

Socialism is not a new thing; it is an old, old thing. It was born in the days of the Middle Ages, when the Church held all the land and all the industries, and the workers were the serfs of the Church. Socialism is the natural outcome of the capitalist system. It is the only system that can solve the problems of the modern world.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

By Carl S. Thompson.

Our state labor department is doing a fine piece of work in the field of labor education. The department has set up a program of labor education that is reaching all parts of the state. The department has also established a labor library that is open to all workers.

The great problem of the labor movement is to educate the workers. The labor movement is the only movement that can solve the problems of the modern world.
