Socialism Not Communism

By Victor L. Berger.

It is Social-Democracy, not Communism. We want to make clear, from the beginning, that the center of our activity is the working class. It is Social-Democracy, to be sure, that Social-Democracy is identified with Collectives. Certain portions of our followers, and in some cases the entire leadership of the party, believe that Social-Democracy is synonymous with Communism. They think that Social-Democracy means the confiscation of all private property, the destruction of the property of the rich, and the establishment of a socialist commonwealth. They are wrong.
Some Letters to an American Farmer.

V. THE INDEPENDENT FARMER IS A MYTH. — THE TRUE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GRANGE AND THE ALLIANCE MOVEMENTS IS MADE CLEAR.

By CLAYTON L. JAM, of Dryden, Michigan.

Dear Mr. Sills: — Judicious is dry. Long columns of letters are addressing to the people. Only scholar cares to dig among them, as they are. The independent farmer is myth. In those days of occupation, when the average farmer cultivated his land, was a consumer of his own production, and held on to all that he produced, he was the true independent. At that time, the Grange and the Alliance movements were not necessary, for the terms of their interdependence were dictated by the necessities of the time.

The independent farmer! The ideal has been praised until many people believe it is a reality. It is not. The conditions of the past are not the conditions of the present, and the terms of our interdependences are dictated by the necessities of the time.

On the northeast is a neighbor Taylor whose farm is of forty acres. He has not sold a single share of his crops since he was married. That is something to be envied. The farm is a self-sufficient and self-supporting one. The crops are grown so that they may be used for seed, and the seed for the next crop. The farm is a small one, but it is a model of self-sufficiency and self-support.
