A Word to the Educated Class as to Social-Democracy

There can be no doubt as to the attitude and the work of the people who are worked upon by Social-Democratic principles. It is true that in some of the European countries where the people have been highly educated, the Social-Democratic movement has made great progress. But in other countries, where the people have not been so highly educated, the Social-Democratic movement has not been so successful.

Moreover, that this means a re-education of the educated class. The public is not yet ready in the mentalities of many of the educated people. It has not been ready to discard its selfishness and superficiality, and to recognize the deep-seated social problems which face the world today.

The first step in the education of the educated class is to make them aware of the existence of social problems. The Social-Democratic movement is not a movement for the rich, but for the poor. It is a movement for the educated class to understand the needs of the workers and to work for the solution of these problems.

The Social-Democratic movement is not a movement for the educated class to become rich, but for the educated class to become poor. The educated class is the class that is able to understand the needs of the workers and to work for the solution of these problems. The Social-Democratic movement is not a movement for the educated class to become rich, but for the educated class to become poor. The educated class is the class that is able to understand the needs of the workers and to work for the solution of these problems.

My dear Mr. Benson,

I write you a note of protest against the statement that you have made in your recent articles in the New Zealand Herald. I have not read your work, but I wish to say that I have read your articles with pleasure and with profit. I have read them with a sense of responsibility.

I hope you have not misunderstood me. I have not dissented from any of your articles. I have simply been writing what I believe to be the truth. HONEY WAKES.

By J. A. Hard.

Honey, the bee's delight,

Now wakes from its winter slumber,

It darts about the garden

As if to revel in the spring.

The flowers are blooming,

And the air is fragrant with the sweet nectar

The honeybee has gathered.

Let us seize the opportunity,

And fill our homes with gentle gladness.

Honey is nature's treasure,

A delight to the palate

And good for the health.

So let us enjoy this precious gift,

And make our lives sweeter.

THOSE SOCIAL - DEMOCRATIC AMENDMENTS! AND WHO KILLED THEM?

Milwaukee Southern Railway Co.

Ordinance introduced June 15, 1906. On July 11, 1906, H. G. Holmes, president of the Wisconsin Railway Company, appeared before the city council at its regular session and presented the following memorandum:

To the city council:

We, the undersigned, having made an extensive investigation of the present situation in the city of Milwaukee in regard to rates charged for the transportation of passengers and freight, and having considered the proposals of the various companies offering service to the public, are of the opinion that the present rates are exorbitant and that the public interest would be better served by a reduction of the same.

The council is requested to amend the existing ordinance so as to provide for a reduction of the rates charged for the transportation of passengers and freight.

The undersigned are further of the opinion that the reduction of the rates would be in the best interest of the public and that the companies should be required to furnish adequate service to all parts of the city.

The council is respectfully requested to consider this matter and to take such action as may be deemed advisable.

MILWAUKEE RAILWAY COMPANY,

Milwaukee, Wis., July 11, 1906.

The company is hereby directed to return all books and papers to the office of the city council at its regular session.

OUR IDEA

About three in a hundred work in the mills, and you never know, if you give a thought to it, how hard they live and work. They are long hours, and the work is hard, and the wages are low. The idea is to help them in their struggle for independence. The Social-Democratic party is working for this, and we hope you will join us in this work.
