Words of the Saints!

By W. J. Berger.

The more I learn about all the great religious leaders of the past, the more I realize that they were men of God. Their lives were marked by a deep spiritual commitment to their faith. They lived by the principles of love, justice, and compassion. Their words and actions were a source of inspiration for those around them. They were the voice of reason and the conscience of their time. Their legacies continue to challenge us today to strive for a better world. As we reflect on the words of these saints, let us remember that their lives are a testament to the power of faith and the importance of spirituality in our lives.
The Process by which Capital is Developed.

HARRY QUELCH, OF THE LONDON "JUSTICE," DESCRIBES IT IN HIS "ECONOMICS OF LABOR."

Capital, say political economists, is that portion of the products of labor which is devoted to the production of more wealth, that is, set aside for the purpose of reproduction. The reproduction of wealth is one of the most important and necessary of the reproductive purposes. When I say "wealth," I mean in most cases the means of production. It is the means by which the laborer is enabled to produce more wealth.

The process of reproduction is the process by which wealth is produced. This process is carried on in the following manner: Labor, when it is engaged in the production of wealth, is employed in the production of wealth. The object of production is to produce wealth. The production of wealth is the process of production. The process of production is the process of reproduction. The reproduction of wealth is the process of production. The production of wealth is the process of reproduction.
