The Age of the Golden Calf
By Victor L. Berger.

SIR Thomas Lipton, the great tea and tobacco baron, came to Milwaukee for a visit. He had brought with him a supply of the finest tea in the world, and he was in high spirits, for he was confident that his tea would be received with enthusiasm by the people of Milwaukee.

He was received by the mayor and the city council, and they were all impressed by the quality of the tea. The mayor presented him with a key to the city, and the city council invited him to a banquet in his honor.

Lipton was a man of great vision and determination. He had built his empire from the ground up, and he was determined to continue his efforts to bring tea to the people of the world.

The Age of the Golden Calf was not over yet. Lipton had plans to expand his business even further, and he was confident that he would be successful in doing so.

The Age of the Golden Calf was a time of great progress and prosperity for Lipton and his company. It was a time when tea was becoming an integral part of the daily lives of people around the world.

The Age of the Golden Calf was a time of change and innovation. It was a time when Lipton and his company were at the forefront of the tea industry, and they were able to use their vision and determination to ensure their success.

The Age of the Golden Calf was a time when Lipton and his company were able to make a significant impact on the world. They had built a business that was admired and respected by people around the world, and they had done so through hard work and determination.

Why the People of America are Becoming Social-Democrats!

FROM AN ARTICLE BY WILLIAM HARDIN IN "THE WORLD TODAY" MAGAZINE

In England, the first hint of socialism, when its advocates and followers, there was a small group of men, a party of thinkers, and a few centrist politicians. One of them was a man known as "Mr. Bright," who was living in a perfect democracy, but he was uncomfortable. He was old-fashioned, and he believed that the people of England were not making full use of their democratic rights and privileges. He knew that in a small way, the people of England were being exploited and oppressed, and he wanted to do something about it.

"I don't think that the people of England are making full use of their democratic rights and privileges," he said. "I believe that they are being exploited and oppressed, and I want to do something about it."

The people of England were not making full use of their democratic rights and privileges. They were not being represented in the government, and they were being exploited and oppressed by the wealthy few. Mr. Bright knew that something had to be done to correct this situation.

"I am going to do something about it," he said. "I am going to organize a movement that will work to make the people of England aware of their rights and privileges, and to make sure that they are being represented in the government."

Mr. Bright founded the Social Democratic Party, and he became its leader. He worked hard to organize the party, and he was successful. The party grew and became more and more powerful. It was soon able to influence the government, and it was able to make changes that were beneficial to the people of England.

"I am glad that I was able to do something about it," said Mr. Bright. "I am glad that I was able to organize the Social Democratic Party, and to make changes that were beneficial to the people of England."

Mr. Bright was a great man, and he was a great leader. He was a great social reformer, and he was a great democrat. He was a great man, and he was a great leader. He was a great social reformer, and he was a great democrat. He was a great man, and he was a great leader. He was a great social reformer, and he was a great democrat. He was a great man, and he was a great leader. He was a great social reformer, and he was a great democrat. He was a great man, and he was a great leader. He was a great social reformer, and he was a great democrat. He was a great man, and he was a great leader.

ORGANIZED LABOR

We take the following from the Iron Workers' Journal:

The Social-Democratic alderman in the Milwaukee city council gave a second reading to a proposed resolution to cut down the water rate a few months past. As the Republican and Democratic aldermen present voiced their objections, the Alderman Berntsen explained that the resolution was intended to make the city more attractive to the manufacturers. He stated that the resolution would not affect the city's finances. The resolution passed unanimously on its first reading.

Real Labor Legislation

The next meeting of the Real Labor Legislation Committee was held on the 7th of this month. The committee discussed the progress of the bill and decided to submit it to the next legislative session. The committee plans to make several amendments to the bill before its final submission.

Wisconsin State Federation of Labor

The Wisconsin State Federation of Labor held a meeting on the 10th of this month. The meeting was attended by members from various locals throughout the state. The federation discussed the current labor issues and decided to support the Real Labor Legislation bill. The federation also passed a resolution calling for an end to the use of child labor in the state.

Social-Democratic Herald
