The value of having a Socialist correspondent at the Haywood trial has now been fully realized. As far as the press is concerned, no single statement has been more valuable than the statement given by the man who has been in constant attendance at the trial during the last few weeks. When the trial was first opened, the Socialist was given a commission to make a report of the proceedings. He was expected to be a faithful observer, and to report accurately and impartially. This he has done, and his reports have been published in the Socialist, and have been read with the greatest interest. He has shown a thorough understanding of the case, and has been able to present it in such a manner as to make it intelligible to the public. His reports have been read with the greatest interest, and have been widely circulated. The Socialist has thus been able to do a great deal of good, and to promote the cause of socialism.

The Socialist has also been able to do much good by his correspondence with the prisoners. He has been able to help them in their struggle for freedom, and to give them advice and counsel. He has been able to keep them informed of the latest developments in the case, and to help them to prepare for the future. The Socialist has thus been able to do a great deal of good, and to promote the cause of socialism.
