Theodore Roosevelt, regarding war.

DALLAS, Dec. 30—The "Gettysburg Address," the most famous of the great speeches of the world, is not, after all, a gettysburg address. It was the address of the Gettysburg Address, the speech that established the Gettysburg Address as a national landmark.

The Gettysburg Address was written by Abraham Lincoln in 1865. It was delivered at the dedication ceremony of the Gettysburg National Military Park on November 19, 1863. The speech is considered one of the most important statements in American history, and it has become an enduring symbol of the nation's commitment to the ideals of freedom, democracy, and equal rights for all.

The Gettysburg Address begins with these famous words: "Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."

The speech is a call to action, urging the people of the United States to live up to the ideals of the country they had created. It is a reminder of the nation's past mistakes and the need for continued vigilance to ensure that the nation remains true to its fundamental principles.

Lincoln's words have resonated through the years and have continued to inspire generations of Americans. The Gettysburg Address is a testament to the enduring power of the written word and the importance of remembering the past in order to shape the future.

The speech was delivered in a small town called Gettysburg, which was the site of one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War. The Gettysburg Address is a powerful reminder of the sacrifices made by those who fought in that battle and the importance of remembering those sacrifices.

The Gettysburg Address is a symbol of the American spirit and the values that have made the United States a great nation. It is a testament to the power of words to inspire and unite people, and it continues to be an important part of American history.

The Gettysburg Address is a reminder that even in times of great conflict and division, there is a need for leaders to speak with clarity and vision. It is a reminder that the nation's future is shaped by the decisions and actions of its leaders, and that the nation's ideals are worth fighting for.

At Wednesday's meeting of the Federated Trades Council, Thomas H. Butler, president of the council, in his address to the membership of the council, said: "The council is an excellent example of the union movement in this state, and we believe that it will continue to grow in the future."

The School Trade.

The trade school under the guidance of the union is now in operation at the headquarters, and will be open to all members of the union who desire to obtain a better education. The school will be open on the first Sunday of each month. The union members are urged to attend these meetings and support the trade school.

On Farmers and Unions.

As the American Society of Equity has been instrumental in the formation of this organization, it is only fair that they should be given more than a passive consideration.

The question of the right of the farmer to organize, and to be represented upon the land, has been, and will continue to be, the subject of considerable discussion. The farmers are naturally anxious to be represented in any such organization, and the union, as an organization, is naturally opposed to such a view.

The union is of the opinion that the farmers are not yet sufficiently organized to be able to carry on the work they have undertaken, and that the union, as an organization, is not prepared to meet the farmers on their own ground. The union is, therefore, of the opinion that the farmers should be given a fair hearing, and that the union should not be allowed to interfere with their organization.

A WINNERS-NEW READY-MADE

In the spring of 1923, a group of workers went on strike at the era. The workers, who were employed by a large manufacturing company, had been negotiating for months over a new contract.

The company refused to budge from its demands, and the workers, led by the newly formed Industrial Workers of the World (IWW), refused to back down. The strike lasted for several months, and the company eventually caved to the workers' demands.

This victory was a significant one for the IWW and for the labor movement as a whole. It demonstrated the power of solidarity and the importance of standing together in the face of corporate oppression.
