SOME EDITORIAL COMMENT

By Frederic Heath.

As an event for a larger and more primary purpose, this election is a strange phenomenon. The state departments at which the vote is cast are filled with the usual spirit of the people, and the newspapers are full of public interest. The election is fought with survival of the fittest, and if the people do not take the right path they may be oppressed by the opposition. The German government has taken a hold of the people, and the American government is to blame for the present state of affairs.

The people of the United States are at the mercy of the German government. They are left to the mercy of the socialists, and they are led to believe that they have the right to vote in the election.

On the contrary the people are left to the mercy of the socialists, and they are led to believe that they have no right to vote in the election.
THE REASON FOR SOCIALISM
By H. EBBELL

Always be ready to go into action to ask who you are making pawns to the game of "Who Is Labor Lord?"

There are two classes of persons, each constituting an immeasurable number of individuals, who form the fabric and therefore benefit the world in a certain way. One of the classes is the rich, and the other is the poor. The first will call the army of the unemployed. It has been established beyond question that all classes have a useful and necessary function. Besides those who cannot earn enough, the million or more of our citizens who would vote for socialism are a great problem. Is it to the many, vagrants, "garbages," "tulips," "sports," criminals, or to the one great class, the rich men, the capitalists and the millionaires? It is to the rich. The working man will not see this if he does not understand the reason for socialism—and he will not understand it if he does not thoroughly understand the meaning of colonialism.

The next sentence may be read in any great city. It is true of every city. It is true of every small town.
And it is true of every country. There is no one, capitalist or working man, who will see the great positions. There are classes. The poor are the working class, and the rich are the working class.
The poor are the rich. The rich are the poor.

The other class is the army of the unemployed. It reaches the total number of ten million, and that does not include the number of persons who are not working, but who work hard and fast, and with all their exertion add not to the wealth of the country. There are many men who work for a very small salary or no salary at all, and yet they are struggling. They are struggling to earn a living, to support their families, to keep themselves from starvation, to keep their children from the poorhouse, to keep their homes from being foreclosed. The rich are the poor. The poor are the rich. The socialists are the rich. The rich are the poor. The poor are the rich.
