WILL YOU MEND YOUR ROOF?

By Victor L. Berger.

The Declaration of Independence is a document that is supposed to sustain the cardinal principles of the American renovation. The famous declaration starts with the following paragraph: "All men are created equal and are endowed with certain inalienable rights, among them life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness."

But do they live equal? Do they have the same rights? The answer is no, and the reasons are many.

"All men are created equal?"

How about the facts? Surrounded by all the commforts and productions which patent law and money can furnish, they grow up in comfort and security and receive an excellent education. His life is a round of pleasures, and yet there is need to him for bread and clothes and shoes.

"All men are created equal?"

Yes, the statement is true, but it does not mean that all men have the same opportunities. The in-er view of society is necessary to health. Unless early treated, by education and training, it is a disease that will be ever cured, and the person is a mere nullity.

"All men are created equal?"

When he dies he has even a very small part of his wealth left in the form of a funeral insurance.

"All men are created equal?"

What is the meaning of the phrase "all men are created equal"? In its true sense, it means that all men have the same rights and opportunities. But in practice, it is far from true.

A great Socialist demonstration in honour of Robert Kennedy has just been held in one of his greatest hometowns, in Wisconsin. It was led by his close friends, Receirs, Harkes, Frances, and others. "The Independent Labor movement, which has been paralyzed through the absence of a new leadership, has no hope of revival.

A thoroughgoing Socialism, with its propaganda and its organization, is in the air. Equality, the equality of the opportunity of all,
will come.

In his New York address, Dele ev said: "We are living in a time of great social change. The working class is rising up to its rightful place in society."

MR. TAFF—By Franklin W. Wentworth.

Mr. Taff did not mean to hunt anybody's feelings when he took the liberty in his Memorial Day speech of saying something that is likely to jar the nerves of some of his hard-boiled friends. He does not wish to see any of them cross the road, but he did not mean to say anything that would make himself hard to understand.

Mr. Taff is a diplomatist and takes care not to say anything that would, if ill understood, jar the nerves of his hard-boiled friends. He means to be understood by all of them and to keep them all on the dance floor.

Mr. Taff is the kind of diplomatist who has no difficulty in being understood by all of his hard-boiled friends. He means to be understood by all of them and to keep them all on the dance floor.

The Constitution and President Haldey of Yale

The editorial department of the American Auto-Cycle took exception to vigorously an article on the conduct of President Haldey of Yale University, addressing him as "the most conspicuous and most powerful man in the country," adding: "It is an open secret that the vast majority of the students are in sympathy with him in his views on race and creed."

The editors of the American Auto-Cycle feel that President Haldey's actions have caused concern among students and faculty members. The editorial continues, "It is an open secret that the vast majority of the students are in sympathy with him in his views on race and creed."

Would you like to see the town establish a parent-teacher association? Mr. W. R. Green, Jr., a most attractive young man, is interested in this. If you are interested, write him.

Mr. Z. B. Brown, who operates the Country Store, reports that perhaps it is because the children are very well educated, but he has not seen a little barefooted child on the street for years. It is thought that he has nowhere to go; his parents are probably too busy to notice.

The nursery garden is in full bloom, and the flowers are lovely. The children are out picking them, and the air is filled with the sweet perfume of the blossoms. It is a lovely day, and the sun is shining brightly. The children are having a great time, and the sounds of their laughter fill the air.
