ARE WE THE BEADELS OF RUSSIA?

By Victor L. Berger

UNITED States Congressmen are not the only ones who have been victimized by London's war programme. Russia's Czar, for instance, has been guilty of a greater crime against humanity than any of his predecessors. He is now engaged in a policy of extermination and enslavement of the Russian people. The Czar is the master of the Russian people, and he is using them as instruments of his own policy.

The Czar's policy is based on the following principles:

1. The suppression of all opposition to his rule.
2. The extermination of the Russian people.
3. The enslavement of the Russian people.

The Czar's policy is being carried out by his generals and military officials. They are using the Russian people as a tool to achieve his ends.

The Czar's policy is being supported by the Russian people. They are being used as a tool to achieve his ends.

The Czar's policy is being opposed by the Russian people. They are being used as a tool to achieve his ends.

Are We Bloodhounds for the Czar!

Vying for liberty themselves, the Czar and his government were purged with the same cordite as the war, and the result was a liberal and unanswerable challenge to people. The war is the war, and the result is the result. The principles of democracy, the welfare of the people, the rights of the individual, are the principles of the war. The principles of democracy, the welfare of the people, the rights of the individual, are the principles of the war. Stray Leaves from a Stranger's Diary

by EMANUEL JULES

A few weeks of exploitation and disillusioning experiences in this diary would not have been possible. While walking down Madison avenue, I met a man who introduced himself as a 'foreigner.' I agreed to listen to his story. It turned out that he was a European, a member of the artistic world, visiting New York to see the 'new' American. I expressed my interest in knowing his impressions of our country. 'I'll tell you a story,' he said. 'A few weeks ago, in a small town in the country, I met a young girl who had left her home to search for work in the city. She had come to New York with hopes of finding a better life. I offered to help her, but she declined. She said she wanted to work on her own. I followed her as she went through the streets, looking for work. She found a job in a factory, where she worked long hours for low pay. She was tired and hungry, but she never complained. One day, she showed me a picture of her family. They were living in poverty, and she was the only one who could support them. I decided to help her. I gave her some money and told her to stay with me. She agreed, and we went to see a lawyer. The lawyer told us that she had no legal right to stay in the country. He gave us advice on how to proceed. We went to the immigration office and filled out the necessary forms. We were granted a temporary stay, and she could continue working. I left her in New York, and she started to work in another factory. She was happy and content. I continued my journey, and I met a lot of other people who were struggling to make a living. I realized that New York is a city of opportunities, but it is also a city of challenges. I decided to return home, but I will never forget the lessons I learned in New York. I will always remember the young girl and her family, who taught me the value of hard work and the importance of family. I will never forget the young girl's story, and I will never forget the lessons I learned in New York.'
Darrow's Appeal to the Court.

A few weeks before the trial of the American Railway Labor Association, E. C. Darrow, the lawyer who represents the union, filed his brief with the court. In his brief, he outlined his arguments in defense of the defendants, pointing out the legal and constitutional issues at stake. He argued that the defendants were not guilty of any crime and that their actions were within the bounds of free speech and association.

There has been much controversy over the case, with many arguing that it was a political issue rather than a legal one. However, Darrow believed that the case was a matter of fundamental rights and that the defendants should be afforded a fair trial. He also argued that the trial should be conducted in a transparent and impartial manner, with all relevant evidence presented to the court.

Darrow's arguments were well-received by many of his peers, who admired his dedication to the cause. Despite the challenges he faced, Darrow remained steadfast in his belief that the defendants were innocent and that justice would prevail in the end.
