ABOLISH PARTIES? WHAT FOR?

By John L. Burke

THE great outcry of some "reformers" of the present day is that the present political parties have accomplished little, or nothing, towards the betterment of the national condition. The Republican party is, they say, the party of big business, and the Democratic party is the party of the common man. Neither party is true to its name, and both are out to work for the interests of the rich and powerful and not for the common interest.

But, does it not seem to you that the present political parties are the only things that have accomplished anything towards the betterment of the national condition? The Republican and Democratic parties have been in office from time immemorial, and have accomplished much in the way of legislation and administration.

The Republican party has been the party of the business man, and the Democratic party has been the party of the common man. Both parties have been responsible for the betterment of the national condition, and both parties have accomplished much in the way of legislation and administration.

In conclusion, I would say that the present political parties are the only things that have accomplished anything towards the betterment of the national condition. The Republican and Democratic parties have been in office from time immemorial, and have accomplished much in the way of legislation and administration.

At the Wisconsin Legislature

(Special Correspondence)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 27: The 75th session of the legislature has come to an end, but the work of the legislators is far from done. The session has been one of conflict and debate, but it has also been one of progress.

The legislature has passed several important bills, including a bill to provide for the education of the deaf and blind, a bill to provide for the care of the insane, and a bill to provide for the care of the poor. These bills are important, and they will have a great effect on the lives of many people.

The legislature has also passed several bills to provide for the betterment of the state. The bills include a bill to provide for the improvement of the highways, a bill to provide for the improvement of the schools, and a bill to provide for the improvement of the hospitals.

In conclusion, I would say that the legislature has done a great deal of work this session, and that the bills that have been passed will have a great effect on the lives of many people. The work of the legislators is far from done, however, and they will have much more work to do in the future.

The Principles We Advocate

Human life depends upon food and clothing. The rights of workers and the people, as guaranteed by law, are worthless if all the workers are not free. If there is a law that states that a man has a right to work, but he has no right to be paid, that law is worthless. The right to work and the right to be paid are indispensable to the life of the people.

The Manus in Baldwin's

The Manus in Baldwin's come from the same sources as the Manus in any country where the Manus are employed. They are the Manus in the United States, in Canada, in the United Kingdom, in France, in Germany, and in any other country where Manus are employed. They are the Manus in Baldwin's who are employed in Baldwin's and in any other country where Manus are employed.

Webster's International Dictionary

The Webster's International Dictionary contains the English language and is a standard reference for English language and literature. It is a comprehensive dictionary that provides definitions, explanations, and pronunciation guides for words in the English language. The dictionary is widely used in schools, libraries, and by language enthusiasts.

Books You Need

Books are a valuable resource for learning and understanding the world. They provide information, insights, and perspectives on various topics. Books can be a source of inspiration, knowledge, and entertainment. They are essential for education and personal development.

Australia in the Foremost Rank

Australia is the foremost rank in the world. This is due to its strong economy, cultural diversity, and political stability. Australia is a multicultural society with a high standard of living and a strong tradition of democracy and human rights.

To the HERALD: There has been an article published in yesterday's edition of the Waukesha Beacon, under the signature of Mr. James Beckman, general manager of the Kilbourn Dam, concerning the Kilbourn Dam Co. operations in the light of the facts concerning the history of the dam. The Kilbourn Dam Co. is committed to operating the dam in a manner that is in the best interest of the public and the environment. We urge the public to consider the claims made in this article with caution and to conduct their own research before drawing conclusions.
