THE MILK IN THE COCONUT—GENTLEMEN!

By John L. Berger

THAT part of the proposition which is most misleading—those who are seeking to carry the agricultural program to its logical end—and who are fighting to make it an end and not a mean—must be given a chance to think things over. It is a pity that they will not do it, because it will then be possible to institute a rational discussion of the problem. A rational discussion is what is needed to solve the problem, and it will not be possible until the farmers are given a chance to think things over.

The chief reason why the farmers are not willing to think things over is that they are afraid of the consequences. They are afraid that the consequences of the farmers' policies will be worse than the problem itself. They are afraid that the farmers will be forced to abandon their land and go out of business. They are afraid that the farmers will be forced to sell their land to the speculators, and that the speculators will turn the land into a wasteland.

But these fears are not well founded. The farmers are not likely to be forced to abandon their land or to sell it to the speculators. The farmers are likely to be able to save their land and to continue to live on it. The farmers are likely to be able to save their land and to continue to live on it if they are given a chance to think things over.

The farmers are not likely to be forced to abandon their land or to sell it to the speculators. The farmers are likely to be able to save their land and to continue to live on it if they are given a chance to think things over.

Will It Work?

By Robert Hunter

TALKS TO TOILERS

I think the main idea is to make the working man realize that he is his own master. He is free to work or not to work, to accept the wage or not. The idea is to make him understand that he is the one who produces the goods and that he is the one who should be in control of the factory. If he doesn't like the wage, he can go and look for another job. If he doesn't like the working conditions, he can demand better conditions. It's all about giving the worker the power to control his own life, to make his own decisions. If he doesn't like the job, he can quit. If he wants more money, he can negotiate for it. If he wants better conditions, he can demand them. The idea is to make him realize that he is not a pawn in the game of capitalism, but that he is a person with rights and freedoms. It's about freedom and democracy.
