Most in Need of Socialism

An Appeal to Women to Join the Ranks

Present Conditions Almost Incurable, and the Future Secure Against a Future of Misery.

By Thomas Michael

Can it be the smile of the beautiful, or the meek, that is being given you as the sign..."He laughs best who laughs last"? for a few minutes, amidst conditions as we are seeing them today. Answer earnestly.

Think of the misery that has fallen upon you, the hard work that you are to undergo to get a job.

If you are a working woman, think for a moment of what you get for all your hard work.

Think of the many indignities that you have to endure, and yet you are to be paid so little. These are the conditions in which you find yourself.

Did you notice the advertisement in the paper? The house was well furnished, you possessed all the conveniences of the season. You went your way, and your income was doubled. But you were not paid what you should be.

Think of the many indigent women who are to be found in the cities, and yet they are to be paid so little.

If you are a middle-class woman...

Socialism Made Plain

By R. B. Hodge

Socialism is the system of society in which all the members of society are equal, and the government is the means by which the equal distribution of wealth is brought about.

Socialism has worked out a plan for the solution of the economic problems of society.

Socialism is not a system for the benefit of the working class.

State socialism is the answer to the question: How shall we distribute the products of the earth among the people of the world? Because we want to get rid of the...
The Head and Foot of the Table

[Adapted from Portland (Or.) Daily News]

Here was one of the best-known Portlanders who had set out on the road to Washington with the others from the state. At the head of a long table, in a dining room, he sat the host—a tall, dignified, well-dressed man. He passed the dishes down the table to the guests of noble blood at his right and his wife at his left—

Next the guests passed the dishes to the children of the house. So the poet, the lawyer, the scholar, the merchant—his family and friends, to the cheese which had in turn passed to the host's area. And after the intellectual parasite had been served, he passed the dishes to the people who had not thought of the grapes, and they, too, might drink in the same garden from the same dish as the host and his guests.

But below the table, upon the cellar floor, were the people who, in the language of the day, made the "deed." Their "deeds" were their daily work which made the "meat" on the table. They raised the crops and harvested them. They butchered the meat and made it safe for the ale and wine and cheese.

In this way, the social order is perpetuated by the state of the upper and lower classes.

And he who built the table was governed entirely by the state of the upper class.

And he who built the table was governed entirely by the state of the upper class.

And he who built the table was governed entirely by the state of the upper class.

The Electrical Workers Mixup

The Michigan State Federation of Labor, a local affiliate of the Michigan Federation of Labor, has formally announced its intention to join the Electrical Workers' Union of America, a national organization representing electrical workers.

The announcement was made at a meeting of the Federation's Executive Council in the city of Detroit. The Council decided to affiliate with the Electrical Workers' Union, which is composed of local unions representing electrical workers throughout the United States.

The decision was made after careful consideration, and the Federation's leaders believe that this affiliation will benefit both the members of the Federation and the Electrical Workers' Union.

The Electrical Workers' Union has a long history of fighting for the rights of electrical workers, and the Federation's leaders believe that this affiliation will give the Federation's members a stronger voice in the struggle for better working conditions and higher wages.

The affiliation will also provide the Federation's members with access to the resources and support of the Electrical Workers' Union, which has a strong network of locals throughout the country.

The Federation's leaders are confident that this affiliation will be a positive step for both the Federation and its members.
