The Plutocratic Ark in the November Elections

Comment on Passing Events

From the Journal

Socialism has just held a national election. The Socialists came out with a substantial victory. The election was a clear statement of public opinion, amounting to a repudiation of the policies of the past.

Archbishop Maser, a Milwaukee editor, said: ‘Socialism means the replacement of democratic institutions with a self-governing association of equal citizens. It means the elimination of poverty, the amelioration of labor, and the realization of the economic potential of the people. It means the abolition of the State.

The Socialists have been socially active in the city for a number of years. In the past, they have been criticized for their lack of unified action. However, the election results demonstrate their ability to mobilize a significant portion of the electorate.

Socialists have been making strides in the city, with a particular focus on the working class. Their message has resonated with those who have been left behind by the city's economic and social policies.

KATIE HEISDORF AT IT AGAIN

The Socialists have been actively engaging with the community, organizing events and distributing literature. Their efforts have been met with both support and resistance from those who benefit from the current economic system.

The Socialists have been working to address the social and economic issues that affect the community. Their platform includes proposals for the redistribution of wealth, the elimination of poverty, and the establishment of a community-based economy.

The Socialists have been criticized for their lack of practical solutions. However, their commitment to social justice and equality is a fundamental part of their message.

The Socialists have been a driving force in the city's social and political landscape. Their presence in the community has been significant, and their influence is likely to continue to grow.

Cities and Street Railway Company Are Partners

In the operation of a street railway, the City and the operating company are partners.

As in any other business, the benefits which either party to this partnership can derive from it depend upon the results of the business.

The success of this business, like any other, depends upon the intelligent effort and consideration which the parties give to it, and the energy and skill with which they work together for their mutual good.

The one great purpose of the partnership is to furnish transportation for the People. If it were not for this public need there would be no street railway.

To secure the purposes of supplying this need the City contributes to the resources of the partnership the restricted use of certain portions of the streets, bridges and other public thoroughfares.

The Company provides all of the capital and takes all of the financial risks. It controls the managerial ability, its technical skill and experience and the services of its employees.

The Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company

The Company bears all the responsibility and does all the work. Yet, the City is not a "silent" partner by any means. It takes an active part in directing the Company's affairs.

The City shares in the financial proceeds of the Company's business. Not only that, it determines what its own share shall be and collects it by means of special taxes and other levies in addition to the regular taxes assessed against other business enterprises. Such taxation is a burden upon the business.

The greatest benefit that the People can derive from the operation of the street railway is in the transportation service furnished. The better the service, the more the People will profit by the City's partnership with the Company.

For this reason the business success of the Company and the quality of its service should be the first consideration with the City as well as the Company. There should be close cooperation and other considerations should not be permitted to interfere with efficiency of the service.

Tricks of the Press Explained

Newspaper Man Tells How Game of Making Public Opinion Is Carried On

Because a news article stands in bold, black type on a page of white paper, and is read by thousands upon thousands of people, some newspaper readers think that it must be true. These readers are deluded, however, if they believe what they read. The following is a reminder of how newspaper stories are written and how they are printed.

The journalist, in writing his story, will often omit important details or add others which will make his story more dramatic. He may also change the names of people involved in the story or use false names. The newspaper editor will then review the story and make changes as necessary to make it more appealing to the public.

Playing with Street Car Patrons

The city's budget committee has decided to cut the budget for the street car system. The committee feels that the current budget is too high and that the system can operate on a lower budget. The city manager has agreed with the committee and has requested that the budget be reduced by 10%. The street car system has been in operation for over 50 years and has served the city well. The manager believes that with some adjustments, the system can continue to serve the city for many more years.
