SOCIALISM, THE NEXT EPOCH OF SOCIETY

By Victor L. Berger

SOCIALISM is the name of an epoch of civilization—the next epoch, if our civilization is to continue.

At the present time, a social movement is sweeping the United States. It is primarily a movement of the working classes, but it is also becoming a movement of the middle classes as well. It is a movement of the masses of the people, and it is a movement of the future.

The movement is primarily directed against the system of private ownership of the means of production. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public ownership, in which the means of production are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is also directed against the system of private ownership of the means of exchange. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public exchange, in which the means of exchange are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of communication. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public communication, in which the means of communication are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of education. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public education, in which the means of education are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of recreation. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public recreation, in which the means of recreation are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of entertainment. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public entertainment, in which the means of entertainment are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of health. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public health, in which the means of health are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of defense. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public defense, in which the means of defense are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of political power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public political power, in which the means of political power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of spiritual power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public spiritual power, in which the means of spiritual power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of religious power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public religious power, in which the means of religious power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of intellectual power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public intellectual power, in which the means of intellectual power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of artistic power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public artistic power, in which the means of artistic power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of scientific power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public scientific power, in which the means of scientific power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of technological power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public technological power, in which the means of technological power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of economic power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public economic power, in which the means of economic power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of social power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public social power, in which the means of social power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of cultural power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public cultural power, in which the means of cultural power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of political power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public political power, in which the means of political power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of military power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public military power, in which the means of military power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of economic power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public economic power, in which the means of economic power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of social power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public social power, in which the means of social power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of cultural power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public cultural power, in which the means of cultural power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of political power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public political power, in which the means of political power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of military power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public military power, in which the means of military power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of economic power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public economic power, in which the means of economic power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of social power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public social power, in which the means of social power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of cultural power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public cultural power, in which the means of cultural power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of political power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public political power, in which the means of political power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of military power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public military power, in which the means of military power are owned by the community as a whole.

The movement is directed against the system of private ownership of the means of economic power. It seeks to replace this system with a system of public economic power, in which the means of economic power are owned by the community as a whole.
The Wisdom of Marx Still Applies in the Trade Union Field

BY ROBERT HUNTING

In 1911 Karl Marx wrote to Eugene V. Debs, who was running for the Presidency, that the time had come for the trade unionists to become organizers. He gave the trade union movement a place in the development of the socialist movement. By organizing they would have their own position, a basis for leadership and influence. The trade union movement would become the political arm of the working class. By organizing they would learn the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. Marx was never more right than he is today.

The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win.

The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win.

The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win.

The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win. The trade union movement today is in a state of ferment. The trade unionists are organizing and organizing. They are forming unions and forming unions. They are forming new unions and organizing old unions. The trade unionists are learning the class struggle, the struggle of the working class against the capitalists. They are learning how to organize, how to fight, how to win.
Milwaukee Socialists in Great Campaign Meeting

"We have been trying to get the government of Milwaukee to help the people to make them feel it is their government. Lawrence, Mass., should be an object lesson to you men and women of Milwaukee. They can get you out into the street they have got you but if you get into the street you've got them. You can easily get things in a powerful way by meeting in the street..."

From National Headquarters

Washington

(Continued from page 2)

"Washington, D. C."

The Washington Post reports today that the State Department is seeking to persuade the government of the Dominican Republic to make a number of changes in its constitution. The State Department's objective is to bring about a more democratic government in the Dominican Republic. The State Department is seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a number of democratic reforms. The changes include the establishment of a bicameral legislature, the protection of civil liberties, and the abolition of the death penalty. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more independent judiciary. The changes include the establishment of a supreme court, the protection of the independence of the judiciary, and the abolition of military courts. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more democratic form of government. The changes include the establishment of a multi-party system, the protection of political rights, and the abolition of the use of force in politics. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open press. The changes include the establishment of a free press, the protection of the freedom of the press, and the abolition of government control over the press. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open society. The changes include the establishment of a free society, the protection of individual rights, and the abolition of state control over society. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open economy. The changes include the establishment of a free economy, the protection of individual economic rights, and the abolition of state control over the economy. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open culture. The changes include the establishment of a free culture, the protection of cultural rights, and the abolition of state control over culture. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open education. The changes include the establishment of a free education, the protection of educational rights, and the abolition of state control over education. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open science. The changes include the establishment of a free science, the protection of scientific rights, and the abolition of state control over science. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open religion. The changes include the establishment of a free religion, the protection of religious rights, and the abolition of state control over religion. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open sport. The changes include the establishment of a free sport, the protection of sporting rights, and the abolition of state control over sport. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open art. The changes include the establishment of a free art, the protection of artistic rights, and the abolition of state control over art. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open science. The changes include the establishment of a free science, the protection of scientific rights, and the abolition of state control over science. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open religion. The changes include the establishment of a free religion, the protection of religious rights, and the abolition of state control over religion. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open sport. The changes include the establishment of a free sport, the protection of sporting rights, and the abolition of state control over sport. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open art. The changes include the establishment of a free art, the protection of artistic rights, and the abolition of state control over art. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open science. The changes include the establishment of a free science, the protection of scientific rights, and the abolition of state control over science. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open religion. The changes include the establishment of a free religion, the protection of religious rights, and the abolition of state control over religion. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open sport. The changes include the establishment of a free sport, the protection of sporting rights, and the abolition of state control over sport. The State Department is also seeking to persuade the government to make changes in its constitution that would provide for a more free and open art. The changes include the establishment of a free art, the protection of artistic rights, and the abolition of state control over art.
Berger Shows the Shame of Lawrence

From the Congressional Record.

To the right of the floor of the house stands a large table which is the center of attention. It is guarded by two sentinels, one on each side, who stand at attention all day and all night. The table is covered with a green cloth and is surrounded by red and blue flags. It is the desk of the Speaker of the House, Mr. McCallum. He is wearing a black suit and a white shirt, and is addressing the members of the house. He is speaking in a clear voice, and his words are recorded by stenographers who sit at tables in the background. The members of the house are listening attentively, some with expressions of surprise and others with expressions of到这里