I'll tell you about it next week. Standard Oil stock is said to be at the highest point in its history. This shows that regulation is a good thing— for the wealth pirates, and that the blow the government struck the octopus by dividing it into imaginary small companies was really to keep the voters divided sgainst their stue interests. Ownership by the people is the only thing. There'll be no relief till we get to that.

cause the committal of these crimes, if permitted, would prove injurious to the welfare of the people in general, though they might advance the interests of those committing them.

Let us suppose the case of a needy man who sees within easy reach the wherewithal to satisfy his wants. All he has to do is to stretch out his hands to get it.

Yet he is not permitted to do so. The law stands before him with a solemn threat. It tells him that it is wiser and better for the welfare of the community that he should suffer-or even that he should perish-rather than that he should take things which do not belong to him.

At least this is the contention of the state in enforcing this regulation." It is for the welfare of the many, as opposed to that of the individual, that this particular citizen must restfain his desires, sometimes even his hunger.

In other words, the first law o nature-that of personal self-preservation---is made subordinate to the code of laws which has been adopted for the preservation of society as it is. A man who is starving cannot even steal a loaf of bread to preserve his life, because stealing is supposed to be destructive to society.

The principle is clearly established and recognized that individual interests-no matter how pressingshould not in any case supersede general interests,

And yet how limited is the application of this excellent principle of restriction.

The law which prohibits the gratification of the poor man's bunger at the expense of his neighbor, to be logical, should prohibit the gratification of the rich man's greed at the expense of his neighbors. If it is just and politic that individuals should be

Leo Kircibraun of Chicago, to the effect that the type of bituminous pavement adorted by the department of public works for Milwaukee, has been approved and adopted by the loard of local improvements for the city of Chicago. This type of pavement comprises a two fach bituminous wear-ing surface on a six inch concrete

The introduction of rock into the wear-ing surface makes is binder course superfluous and in cases the quality and durability of the pavement. The rock forms an internal re-enforcement and gives it "inherent stability." This pavement is, therefore, harder in serve-mer time than the ordinary sand asphalt mix, and no harder in winter time.

mer time than the ordinary sand asphait mix, and no harder in winter time. "" The changes introduced into the as-phait paying specifications in Milwau-kee during 1911. was the beginning of a new era in the paying industry. The corresponding drop in the prices of bituminous payement, which is ap-proximately $1.00 per square yard, now makes it possible for asphalt to be laid in almost any small town. Two more towns have recently adopted specifications similar to those used in Milwaukee, Joliet, Illinois and the city of Chicago. Two dollarradid forty celt asphait paying will be unknown in the larger towns inside of three years. Other cities which have advord this type of payement are. Creston, Iowa: Topeka and Emporis, Kas. The speaker was self-possessed and thoroughly understood bandling crowts. He knew that every mob must have a leader so he paid no stiention to the students swarming around, but kept his eye peeled for the leader that would start things. Sure enough, in about two minutes he bobbed up, a six-feet giant with a great mane of hair and a voice like the bull of Basham. To the speaker's astonishment, the leader imitated a weak feminine voice and screeched out this question:

"Mistah Speaker, may I ask a question?"

"Well, I had fish for supper; what d'ye think of that?"

How Oceans Are Made

How Uceans Are Made As the part of the earth's crust near the present is and of New Zealand began to rise. In obediance to the centrifugal force developed by the earth's rotation, the crust on the opposite side crucind and splits in two, forming the bund of the At-lantic ocean. Before the cruck could widen more than 9,000 miles the pull became so forming nearly three-quarters of the earth's whole crust, was taken out of the middle and carried 'sway to form the moon. This left a continent on each side of the Paedho. Thus the Atlantic bed was formed only a few moments before that of the Paedho, and its necessity for two chief oceans instead of one is made fairly apprent.—Professor Pickering.

Simple Homes

The reign of bries-brao is ending. That confusion of our rooms, as it were externalising the confusion of middle-class minds, has lately felt the attack of the revived ideal of simplicity. In many houses now you are refreshed by un-encumbered walls, merely decorated by quiet, plain papers, without pictures or fans or plates. A few necessary chairs; a table meant for usel fewer things everywhere, and those things better chosen—that is the new ideal in furnishing.— Daily Mirror.
