Social-Democracy of the United States, in Convention Assembled, Picks Its Standard Bearer

Indianapolis Convention Drafts Constructive Platform and Gives Votaries of Sabotage the Right About!

On to the Two Millions!!

The Social-Democratic platform has been worked out, and the two million strong working men of the country have never had a better and more practical program before them to follow in the near future.

The platform was adopted at the meeting of the Indianapolis Convention, which was held in the Hollander Room, 101 West Washington Street, Indianapolis, Ind., last night.

The convention, which was called to order by President-elect David J. Dinkins, of Chicago, and continued to act throughout the night, adopted the following resolutions:

Resolution, on the order of the day, proposed by Abraham H.极为, of Chicago, and adopted by the convention:

Resolved, That the resolutions of the convention be submitted to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, at its meeting in May, 1912, for consideration.

The convention then adjourned.

Emil Seidel of Wisconsin

A Dueser judge announced a new five-year sentence for embezzling 30,000 dollars. The defendant, who had been sentenced to ten years in jail for the same offense in 1908, was again sentenced to five years in the same institution.

Socialism’s Call to Duty for 1912 Campaign. What Party Stands For

Following is the Socialist convention platform as formulated by Charles Edward Russell, Victor L. Berger, James F. Collins, Paul V. Jones, Eben Wilson, W.J. Ghent, Louis J. Darrow, and the able and eloquent David J. Dinkins, the able and eloquent Abraham H.极为, and adopted by the convention under the title “The Socialists’ Plea for the Nation.”

The Socialist party of the United States is the only governmentally organized party in the country that stands for universal suffrage, for the elimination of special privilege, for the abolition of the capitalist system and its replacement by a cooperative, democratic, and socialist society.

"Coming Events Cast Their Shadow Before"

The sign of the times—its aroma, its story—may be found in the coming events, and in the shadow they cast over the present. The coming events are like the shadow of a cloud, they are hard to see, and yet they are ever present. The cloud may be far away, but the shadow it casts is always there, reminding us of its presence.

Some Objections to Socialism Answered

By H. S. MATT

Worried Socialist says it prevents his having a house of his own and going where he likes, and there are some objections to it. The writer says that Socialism is not so bad, and it can be a great help to those who work hard and are honest.

National Socialist Convention Repudiates Direct Action

CONVENTION HALL, INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.-Dramatic culmination of four years of labor for recognition of the industrial principle in labor organizations came late yesterday evening with complete approval and support of a full majority committee report on the convention to the party to labor unions. It is unnecessary to say that any labor organization to be successful must be based in the world of industry. The order of the day was the discussion of the report, and under the right of controverting points of view, the convention then adjourned. The industrists are here in the convention hall and the final convention adjourned early in the evening with complete approval and support of the report. The report is based on the following: Any member of the party who may advocate violence in any way is hereby repudiated.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

HANS; THE STORY OF A GERMAN BOY

By Martin Gale

CHAPTER I

Many years have passed since the author lived in Milwaukee. He was a young boy then, and his family lived in the part of the city known as the Third Ward. The family was not wealthy, but they were happy. Hans, the author, was the oldest of five children. His mother was a kind and gentle woman, and his father was a hard-working man who owned a small hardware store.

EXPERIMENTER.

The family lived in a small house on the outskirts of the city. The house was not large, but it was comfortable and well-kept. The family had a small garden in the back yard, and Hans and his brothers spent many happy hours there, playing with their dog and enjoying the sunshine.

The author, as a child, was very curious and always wanted to know how things worked. He was interested in science and invention, and he spent many hours experimenting in the garden. He would read books about electricity and try to build simple electrical devices. He would read books about mechanics and try to build simple machines. He was always eager to learn and explore, and he was not afraid to try new things. His parents were proud of him and supported his interests.

Will the Courts Take Tumbl?

Chief Justice Warren of the Supreme Court of the United States has delivered an opinion that the case of the People v. the County of Los Angeles is a case of "judicial interference with the administration of the law." The opinion states that the courts have no power to interfere with the administration of the law and that the case is a violation of the Constitution.
