National Socialist Candidates' Tours Presage the Change to Come
Editor Harvey's Alarms and His Predictions Regarding Socialism

BY E. A. WIDAKIN.

In his article in the North American Review the Social Democrat editor, in his nomenclature, explains why he has come to the conclusion that a socialist republic is necessary. He points out that the government is essentially a socialist one, and that his views are those of the people. He states that, in his opinion, the government is the sole organ of the people, and that its actions are determined by the will of the people. He also argues that the government is the only power that can ensure the well-being of the people, and that it is the duty of the government to protect the interests of the people.

Henry Ashton Philanthropy, and the Interesting Case of Miss Anne Morgan

By MARY HOODSMITH

The following article is a brief account of the work of the American Association for the Abolition of Capital Punishment, which is doing excellent work in behalf of those who are condemned to death. It will be published in our next issue.

"Daddy's Comin!"

Theodore Roosevelt, the recent President, said: "I am in favor of capital punishment." This statement was made in a speech delivered in Milwaukee, Wis., last week. The President is a man of great ability and energy, and has done much good work in the cause of justice.

Aunt Build a Bridge and Bury Their Dead

I have been in the habit of writing about Senator Dague for some time, and I am glad to say that he is doing his best to help the working classes.

Dog That Rings a Fog Bell

I think that my reputation as a lover of dogs is well known. I have always been a great admirer of the faithful and true friend of man, and I am happy to say that I have a fine dog who is always ready to help me.

Progressives or Conservatives

One of the things that I dislike most about Conservatism is its tendency to be a bad influence of the people.

Staggered Jefferson

I am glad to say that I am not a Jeffersonian. I have always been a Progressist, and I believe in the progress of civilization.

Best Material for Soldiers

I think that the best material for soldiers is the working class. They are the only ones who truly love their country and will do their duty.

Socialism Among the Japanese

The progress of Socialism among the Japanese as a result of the political situation is discussed. It is noted that the movement is gaining strength, and that it is being supported by a growing number of intellectuals and workers. The author emphasizes the need for understanding and dialogue with this emergent movement.

What They Make—What They Get

In the United States and Japan, the workers' struggle for better wages and conditions is highlighted. The author notes the disparity between the workers' efforts and the profits enjoyed by the employers. It is argued that a fair distribution of wealth and a cooperative economy are necessary to achieve a just society.

Candidates' Tours

Candidates for political office are touring the country to gain support. The author criticizes the lack of genuine issues being discussed and the focus on personal gain rather than the welfare of the workers. The need for a more democratic and participatory political system is emphasized.

Kerr's Lackey on the N. E. C.

The author satirizes certain politicians who are seen as puppets of the corporate elite. The article questions the integrity of these individuals and their ability to represent the interests of the working class.

Cam's False Witness About the Minutes of the Barnes Hearing

The author exposes a false witness who testified in a court case. The witness's credibility is called into question, and the author highlights the importance of truth and fairness in legal proceedings.
