FRENCH SOCIALISTS ON COLONIZATION

The Joint Committee of French socialists elected five great preparatory congresses. The first was held in Paris, July 29-31, attended by many leading French Socialists. The second, held in Montmorcuy, Paris, Sept. 29-Oct. 1, was engaged in making preparations for the third. The third Congress was held in London, Oct. 8-9, and was attended by representatives of leading French Socialist parties from all over the country. The fourth Congress, held in Paris, Oct. 15-16, had the consideration of the position of the French Socialist party in the colonial movement. The fifth Congress was held in Paris, Dec. 10-11, and was attended by representatives of the French Colonial Socialists. The fifth Congress was held in Paris, Dec. 10-11, and was attended by representatives of the French Colonial Socialists.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN

In the speech delivered before the National Convention of the American Federation of Labor at Washington, D.C., on June 13, 1899, the following was said:

"The time is coming and it is not far distant when the white man will be called upon to render an account to God for the manner in which he has been called upon to render an account to God for the manner in which he has treated his fellow men of a different color. For this reason, I ask you to lay the whole matter before the national convention and let us see if we cannot think of some method of providing for the future which will tend to make this country a land of peace, justice, and prosperity for all its inhabitants, regardless of race or color."
The Social Democratic Party of America declares that life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness for all men and women and child are conditioned upon the right of all people to work, to produce and to share in the products of social and industrial organization.

The private ownership of the means of production and distribution and the application of human forces in the service of capital, whether free or compelled, is the indispensable condition of social and industrial organization.

The occupation of the workers, especially the laboring classes, is the basis of class antagonisms, i.e., the basis of the class struggle.

The workers may admire or even love Mr. George, "Uncle Tom's" first master, and be quite content with his second class, for there we behold the concrete expression of the oppressor, in his destruction of the oppressed, on wrong and robbery.

The master, the plunderer of the Socialist there (in Europe) is the oppressor, not the owner, of the means of production and distribution.

That the same economic forces which have produced and now maintain the struggle are the same which compel the adoption of Socialism, the collective ownership of the means of production for the community is the only solution of the social question.

That the trade union movement and independent political action are the chief emancipating factors for the workers in Europe is outside of the scope of this discussion.

As a step in this direction we, the Socialist Party of America, do hereby adopt:

1. Revision of our antiquated and out-worn constitution, to remove the obstacles to the full development of our forces.

2. The public ownership of all railroads, telephones, telegraphs, etc., and the development of public ownership in all utilities and public services.

The Social Democratic Party is one of the oldest, most prominent and most faithful members of the S. D. P. in Massachusetts ever had. You find it true, too, that the time has come for every position. The party in the state had to borrow. He was organiser of the S. D. P. in Massachusetts from 1893 to 1896, and literary agent for two years. In 1891 he was chosen as one of the state committees and served as such for several years while the state committees continued to function. Somerville, Dec. 19, 1898.

To the National Executive Committee of the Social Democratic Party:

Because of my desire for the success of the S. D. P. in Massachusetts for the benefit of the proletariat of America, I submit to you the following exhortation, as the best that I can obtain. I am well aware that, as an individual organizer, my views may not be shared by all, and that the views of others may differ. However, I believe that the Social Democratic Party has a responsibility to act in the best interest of the working class.

Your truly,

Henry K. Bixler.

Socialism in Massachusetts, Commonwealths of Massachusetts, House of Representatives.

BOSTON, FEB, 3, 1899.

To the Members of the House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts:

This bill was introduced in the interest of the working man, who has been, and is now being, subjected to such a narrowness of opportunity and such a meagreness of gain, that his life has been made a series of sacrifices and drudgery.

We believe that the working man is entitled to greater opportunities for the development of his faculties, and to a better compensation for his labor. We believe that the working man is entitled to a larger share of the wealth which he creates, and to a larger measure of the fruits of his toil. We believe that the working man is entitled to a larger measure of the ownership of the means of production, and to a larger share of the control of the great industries of the country.

We, therefore, propose to establish a system of compulsory insurance, under which every working man shall be protected against the losses he may sustain by accident or sickness, and shall be provided with a pension in old age. We also propose to enact laws to regulate the hours of labor, and to provide for the education of the working man.

We believe that these measures are necessary for the welfare of the working man, and for the advancement of the country.

We urge upon you the necessity of passing this bill, and we trust that you will give it your careful consideration and your prompt action.

Respectfully submitted,

[Signature]

State Editor.—I agree with the saying that the best form of government is that which least interferes with the business of the people. It is a saying that has been current nearly as long as the monarchy, and the people have always been more or less in the habit of regarding it as a true one. It is a saying that has been repeatedly repeated, and is perhaps the only one that has been repeated with any very great success.

There are two ways of looking at the matter. Some people think that if the government does nothing, then it is the best form of government. Others think that if the government does too much, it is the worst form of government.

I think that the best form of government is that which does just the right amount of work at the right time. It is a saying that has been current nearly as long as the monarchy, and the people have always been more or less in the habit of regarding it as a true one. It is a saying that has been repeatedly repeated, and is perhaps the only one that has been repeated with any very great success.

The only way to keep up with the change is to keep up with the change.

Democratic.

The real meaning of democracy is that every man shall have a voice in the government of his country, and that the government shall be conducted for the benefit of all the people. In a republic, the people have no voice in the government of their country, and the government is conducted for the benefit of the rich minority.
A member of the board may be removed by a majority vote of the local branch, provided no member other than himself is present when the vote is taken, and the vote is by ballot and not by voice vote, and the vote is taken at a meeting called for that purpose. ing of the officers of the Board shall transact business requiring the transmission of their several offices and transmitting and filing such local branch.
No danger! In the Reichstag last night the Social Democratic leader, Mr. Kautsky, demanded that the government guarantee the right of every worker to receive a fair share of the produce of the land. He charged the government with being responsible for the squalid conditions of the working classes, and declared that the government's action in this matter was absolutely imperative. Mr. Kautsky's speech was received with a roar of applause by the Social Democratic majority in the Reichstag.

The government has announced that it will not yield to the demands of the Social Democrats, and has appealed to the army to suppress any movement that may be planned.

In the American Federation of Labor, the executive board has issued a statement condemning the Social Democracy's demand as illegal and revolutionary. The federation has called on all its members to support the government in its struggle against the Social Democrats.

The government has also announced that it will issue a declaration of war if the Social Democrats carry out their threatened revolution.

In the United Kingdom, the government has appealed to the people to maintain law and order, and has promised to give the necessary measures to suppress any attempt at revolution.
