GLORIOUS NEWS FOR SOCIALISTS

How Social Democrats Made Themselves Fall at Brockton

(Franklin Brockton, Mass. Evening Enterprise)

The state election is over, the votes have all been counted, and the results are made, and the day of Brockton Social Democracy is over.

If there was a pleasant one in Brock ton, the vote was a large one for an unorganized and unprepared Social Democratic party. It was a large one as a mirror ball at the returns came in and we realized that the unexpected had happened. The Social Democratic party had got its greatest strength from the poor, while the Democrats could not laugh at them, for there was hardly enough of that crowd left to laugh. The Democrats in fact were beaten by the new party on about everything except the state ticket outside of the head, and they had a lot of surprise.

It was a night of surprises. The results were as follows:

Socialists for candidates for governor at Brockton

Porter, S. D. .................................................. 1,274
Pett, L. .......................................................... 357
Pett, F. .......................................................... 81
Farr, T. .......................................................... 11

The result of the election at Whittam was another big surprise to the old-line Social Democratic party. It was open at 6 o'clock Social Democrats had 14 votes for candidates for governor, and 9 for candidates for United States Senator. The Democrats lost some, but were able to come up from behind.

The result of the election in the North was also a big surprise to the Democratic party. The result was a carryover from last year's election, and the Democratic candidates for governor and United States Senator lost more than they gained.

The Social Democratic party in the North was a very near spoiling of things and gave the Social Democrats a chance to win the election. The candidate for governor was not against them, but the Social Democrats did not win.

The Social Democrats made gains in every section, but Ward 3 in Brockton and Ward 2 in Fall River were the most important. The Social Democrats carried the entire city, and for the first time in the city this is the case. The Social Democrats were well organized and had a lot of support. The result of the election is a great victory for the Socialists.

SOJOURNERS IN THE HEARD

THE TERNED DOWN

Just as the controversy over the election of Frederick O. MacArthur, candidate of the Republican party, and the removal of representations from Plymouth communities not interested in the presidential campaign, had come to a close, the Democratic party was in the process of disbanding. The party's leadership was aware that the campaign had been beneficial, but not enough to prevent the formal dissolution of the organization. The result was a mixed feeling among the members, some celebrating the end of a long and difficult period, while others lamented the loss of an effective political voice.

In the aftermath of the election, the Democratic party's leaders attempted to regroup and find a new direction. They realized that the campaign had been divisive and that the party needed to focus on the needs of the electorate, not just on the personalities of the candidates.

Despite the challenges, the Democratic party remained committed to advocating for the interests of the people. They knew that they had a long road ahead, but they were confident that with the right strategy and leadership, they could emerge stronger and more united.

The end of the campaign marked a new chapter for the Democratic party, and they were eager to move forward and rebuild their organization.

counties, and towns, gave Porto 507.5 and MacArthur 324.5. However, since there have been two contests, the number of votes will be 228.5.

The unreported district votes for Porto are 1,800. The totals for both candidates are 3,975, with Porto leading by 975 votes.
