The Revolutionary National Struggle of the Negroes

By TOM JOHNSON

This article was published in the "The Southern Worker" newspaper on Saturday, March 7, 1914. It discusses the revolutionary national struggle of the Negroes in the United States, highlighting their fight for freedom and equality. The article mentions various events and figures, such as the 1912’s strike in Birmingham and the 1913’s march in Washington, D.C., and how these events contributed to the struggle for civil rights.

By TOM JOHNSON

The slogan of the time is "The Struggle of the Negroes for freedom and equality." This slogan sums up the essence of the national struggle of the Negroes. The struggle is a struggle for the right to live, to work, to vote, to have a voice in the government, and to have a say in the future of the United States.

In the South, the Negroes are fighting for their rights as American citizens. They are fighting against the system of segregation and discrimination that has been in place for many years. They are fighting for the right to vote, to have access to education, and to have equal opportunities in the workplace.

In the North, the Negroes are fighting for their rights as well. They are fighting against the system of discrimination that has been in place for many years. They are fighting for the right to live in a safe and healthy environment, to have access to quality healthcare, and to have equal opportunities in the workplace.

The struggle of the Negroes is not just a struggle for themselves. It is a struggle for all Americans. It is a struggle for justice and equality. It is a struggle for the future of the United States.

The War Veterans' Loan Bill

The War Veterans' Loan Bill has been passed by Congress over President Wilson's veto. The bill provides loan guarantees to veterans who have served in the armed forces.

The bill is a great victory for the veterans. It provides them with the opportunity to purchase homes, cars, and other goods. It also provides them with the opportunity to start their own businesses.

The bill is a great victory for the nation. It provides the veterans with the opportunity to contribute to the economy. It also provides the nation with the opportunity to benefit from the experience and skills of the veterans.

The bill is a great victory for the families of the veterans. It provides them with the opportunity to own a home, to start a business, and to provide for their children.

The bill is a great victory for all Americans. It provides the veterans with the opportunity to contribute to the economy and to provide for their families. It also provides the nation with the opportunity to benefit from the experience and skills of the veterans.

The bill is a great victory for the future. It provides the veterans with the opportunity to start their own businesses, to provide for their families, and to contribute to the economy.
