Relief Is Big Issue in Mine Strike Now

Workers Must Show Solidarity By Raising Relief at Strike Spreads

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—“Second Wind” is sweeping through the ranks of the striking miners. Instead of striking mine workers, three men a week, by name, are more than the number that do the work of 100 skilled miners. This shows that the strike is not the result of a series of strikes, but of a well-planned campaign, led by the leaders of the miners' union. The miners are united in their determination to strike until they get the wages they have been denied. The strike is not just for the miners, but for all workers who are oppressed by capital. The miners are not alone in their struggle. The whole working class is united in the fight for the abolition of capital and the establishment of a socialist society.

Obstetrician from Four Days After Birth. The patient died and it was finally learned that she had been operated on for a cataract. In another case, a woman was operated on for a cataract and during the operation her eye was damaged and she lost it. This case was reported in the New York Times.

The experience of the Negro in the war was a matter of pride and honor. The Negro soldiers were trained and equipped as well as the white soldiers. They fought bravely and earned the respect of their white comrades. The Negro soldiers were not allowed to wear the same uniform as the white soldiers, but they were given a distinctive uniform that was easily recognized.

The war also had a profound effect on the Negro community. The Negro soldiers were able to come home and bring with them a sense of pride and self-respect. The war helped to break down the barriers of race and class and gave the Negro a new sense of identity.
