ALLEGED SLAYER OF GIRL KILLED

BALTIMORE, Md., June 25.—Emma E. Roberts, accused of the murder of Mrs. Woodrill, whose body was found in Rose Creek, was shot and instantly killed early to-day by C. M. Willey and Harry Keone, after he had fired at the posse with a .44 caliber revolver in resisting arrest.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF GIRL KILLED

The body was found in a little creek near McDaniels, a hamlet on the Eastern Shore. It was unclothed, the skull was battered in, and heavy weights were tied about the waist, making it clear that the young woman, who was only twenty years old and unusually good-looking, was murdered.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF GIRL KILLED

Mrs. Woodrill was a woman of unusual loveliness. She was as clever as she was pretty, and as a result was popular with everybody. She had a fortune in her own right, and would have inherited her foster father's estate.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF GIRL KILLED

Roberts and Captain Thompson were friendly, and visited each other regularly. When the Woodrills arrived from Los Angeles Roberts was at the Thompson place, and the first afternoon he took the young couple out in his motor boat. A couple of days later Mrs. Woodrill went along with the man for a short sail.

DOINGS IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

TWO MORE GAMES FOR THE GIANTS

Classy New Yorkers Ditto Wednesday's Stunt—Home Runs for Doyle and Snodgrass.

History repeated itself on the Polo Grounds yesterday, the Giants taking another double-header from the Boston Red Sox.

Coffey covered more territory than a souse going home through a temperance neighborhood.

by turns good and bad, three runs being cut off at the plate. Against this record there were three tallies that never should have been recorded.

Manager Bowerman presented a scrambled line-up in the second bout, Bates, Beaumont and Dahlen being tided to beat it and Stem, Coffey and Beck getting an opportunity to play.

The second game was full of home runs, wild pitches and changes in the line-up. Manager McGraw whiffed for his reserves and used six of them.

The Giants got a running start of five tallies on the visitors and later helped themselves to seven more runs on solid hitting and frantic fielding by the opposition.

There will be another double-header on the Polo Grounds this afternoon, the Brooklyn being New York's opponents, instead of the Boston.

YANKS ERRORS LOSES GAME

Knight and Elberfeld the Culprits. Cree Scores All Three Highlanders' Runs.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—"Big Chief" Stallings shifted his infield talent about a bit yesterday. Elberfeld going to short and Knight to second, but the change did not help the Highlanders, and they were beaten by the Athletics, 5 to 3.

Walter Manning and Harry Morgan were the pitchers, and with good support the former Tri-State would at least have earned a draw with the minstrel man. Manning was pulled out in the eighth so that Laporie could bat for him, and Hughes finished, allowing a hit.

If "Birdie" Cree hadn't been in the game it is doubtful that the Hilltoppers would have scored. The little fly-chaser was the only visitor to make a tour of the sacks, rounding them in the third, fifth and seventh cantos.

"Birdie" whiffed on his first appearance at the plate, but on his second smashed the ball over the high and distant right field wall for a home run. Previously the only pastimee who made such a colossal clout was Baker, the locals' third-sacker.

The Athletics won the game in the fourth inning, Cy Morgan taking a hand in winning it. He cracked out a double which sent Baker and Barry home. Baker had forced Barry, who reached first on Elberfeld's error, and Barry had received a pass.

Buying Boys' Clothing at such unusual reductions is like finding money.

Examine our Boys' Clothing and you will find that it is made for boys. Strong seams and double seats. In addition to the durability of our Boys' Clothing must be mentioned the fine style—styles that will please the boys, and especially your boy.

Why these Reductions of about One-half?

BECAUSE this is our Semi-Annual Sale, which is made to close out the stock on hand. This firm never carries over stock from one season to another. Being thoroughly acquainted with the clothing trade, we feel that the changes in fabrics and fashion will be considerable. To keep on hand even a small number of garments of this season is utterly out of question. Hence this reduction sale.

3,300 Boys' Wash Suits

These Boys' Wash Suits were made to sell at 75c and even higher. During this remarkable Reduction Sale they will all be offered at the astonishing price of 29c

To guard against dealers who may want to buy large quantities at this low price, we have decided to limit the number of these suits sold to one customer to six. More than half of these Boys' Wash Suits are included in a large selection of RUSSIAN SAILOR BLOUSES, the quality and style of which is first class. Washing them will be found easy.

THE AGITATORS—A Story of the Dawn

Sonia had said at first that her visit must be brief; she gratefully surprised her friends by saying that she would stay to stay with them for some time. "I am interested in the colony," she told them, "and the country does me good."

"You are right, dear," said Madeline. "I wouldn't wear such things any longer; but I keep them as curiosities."

"Do you mean that?" "No, I mean cold-blooded." "Isn't it just reticence?" "Yes, that's it. He won't talk except about outside things. You might think when he is talking that he and the other person don't exist. He chops off a few words the same to everybody. He's a secretive character and I despise that."

CHAPTER XVIII. Things had been going from bad to worse at the Rodgers's. The old man had been drunk several times as he came home with empty milk cans from Westvale. A lantern swung under his wagon, the unguided horse slowly walking up the little hills and along the dark curves of the gorge road. Rodgers sang old songs with hoarse effort that made the echoes ring discordantly. He swore at the horse between verses and shouted that his leg was bad again and the automobiles ran into him and the young rascals in town made fun of a poor old man. There was trouble with the milk inspector and the police. The milk dealer was often unjust and accused him of not giving his cows the standard ration. Rodgers, with tears in his eyes, swore by the Virgin, as he recounted the interview to the rocky ears of the gorge, that he would starve himself and the old woman before he cheated the cows of their due measure of beer grains and combination feed.

"You'd find it out anyhow, testin' th' milk, an' then where'd I be?" Sometimes Mrs. Rodgers drove to Westvale to relieve her husband, though it was hard for her to endure the jolting ride on a seat without a back. Madeline met her on one occasion. Mrs. Rodgers said the cows had been breaking out of the badly fenced pasture, and once they were driven into the pound, which cost a dollar apiece. Also Gargans had to be paid. The old man was in such shape that he was unable to plant corn for his cattle this year, to say nothing of having a garden. He never did have much garden, but the lack of fodder and ear corn would be a serious thing the coming season. His leg was that bad, he was just trying to keep the flies out of it.

of her head. "I'll think it over." "Don't think it over—just tell me how much you need." "No, darlin', it's better I think it over. Maybe we'll get over our troubles soon an' I know what deb; is an I'd rather so bankrupt clean before shartin' to beg."
