REPORT

Of the Tenth National Convention

TO THE TENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION

OF THE

SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY.

Never before has a National Convention under conditions so favorable to the advance of the Socialist movement in this country met, and its proceedings were a decided success. The Tenth National Convention, held in the Charter Oak, New York City, from June 2d to June 10th, was a meeting of the most important part of the Socialist Labor Party, representing the interests of the working classes in nearly every part of the country. It was a meeting of the most democratic character, with representatives from all parts of the United States, and the proceedings were conducted with the greatest thoroughness and decorum.

The convention was called to order on Monday morning, June 2d, by Samuel Calvert, of New York City, who was selected by acclamation as chairman. The first business of the convention was the adoption of rules and regulations, and the election of a committee of five to prepare the program of the convention. The committee consisted of: J. M. P. Miller, of New York City; A. W. Davis, of Boston; George W. Halsey, of Chicago; and C. H. Ball, of Philadelphia.

The convention then proceeded to business of the day, and after a thorough discussion of the various questions before it, decided to adjourn until Monday, June 9th, in order to consult with the national executive committee.

On Monday, June 9th, the convention again met in the charter oak, and after a brief adjournment, proceeded to business of the day. The convention was called to order by J. M. P. Miller, who was re-elected chairman of the convention.

The convention then proceeded to business of the day, and after a thorough discussion of the various questions before it, decided to adjourn until Monday, June 10th, in order to consult with the national executive committee.

On Monday, June 10th, the convention again met in the charter oak, and after a brief adjournment, proceeded to business of the day. The convention was called to order by J. M. P. Miller, who was re-elected chairman of the convention.

The convention then proceeded to business of the day, and after a thorough discussion of the various questions before it, decided to adjourn until Monday, June 11th, in order to consult with the national executive committee.
THE PEOPLE, SUNDAY, JUNE 10, 1900.

Grand Picnic and Summernight's Festival

"An" Section New York, Socialist Labor Party,

ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 4, 1900.

-Salzer's Westchester Park, West Farms.

Tickets Bearing Stamps for Goodwill. Also various Stamps for Price of Tickets.

TO COMMENCE AT 2 P.M.

TICKETS, FOR GENTLEMEN AND LADIES, 25 CENTS.

HOW TO GET THERE—Take Third Avenue car to 123d street, transfer to West Farms trolley, to West Farms Park.

OFFICIAL.

ULICLINTICHE ARBEITZER-ZEITUNG

Owned and Published by the Socialist Labor Party.

MAY FERUS, EDITOR.

Published Every Saturday.

Price 5 Cents.

PROHIBITED.

No subscription subscriptions received.

MASSACHUSETTS

ROCHESTER...

Removal. That waiver restrictions of the law admitting foreigners to the State of Massachusetts, in this connection with the Territory of New York, and in this connection with the Territory of New York, is hereby prohibited.

That the摘要 is not restricted.

That the摘要 is not restricted.

That the摘要 is not restricted.

TAYLOR, May 27, 1899.