"A GREAT CONVENTION."

California "Socialism" Pictorially Emblazoned For the Edification of Class Conscious Workingmen.

Los Angeles, Oct. 29—The people of California on Saturday last, were given a potted history of the "Great Convention," which was held in San Francisco last week. Dr. Sears, the "Socialist" speaker, intimated that the content of the program was "too vast and sweeping," and could not be covered in a single sentence. His remarks were received with applause, and the crowd of the "Socialists" assembled for the purpose of hearing the speaker's discourse.

Dr. Sears, in his address, said that the "Great Convention" had been called to discuss the questions of the day, and that the "Socialist" platform was the result of the hard work of the "Socialist" party. The "Socialist" platform was then read, and the audience was requested to vote to adopt it. The vote was recorded, and the audience then adjourned.

The "Great Convention" was an event of much interest, and the people of California were proud to have been a part of it.

The controversy between the Commercial Club and the trade unions in Pittsburgh has been a serious and grave issue.

The Commercial Club, which was formed to promote industrial peace, has been involved in a bitter struggle with the labor organizations.

During the course of the controversy, the Commercial Club has been accused of being a tool of the capitalist class, and of trying to undermine the labor movement.

The labor organizations, on the other hand, have been accused of being an obstacle to industrial progress, and of being a threat to the prosperity of the city.

The dispute has been a very difficult one to settle, and it has been the subject of much controversy and debate.
