Wilkes Strike Breakers at Waterford.

Woolen Trust Plays Its Last Card.

Will Make Strike Breakers at Waterford, and Other Points, "Invade" Against Strike Breakers. Public Indictment at the Moonlight Meeting.

The strikers' last appeal to the Woolen Trust for resolution of the strike was made by the American Woolen Company, which was represented by its president, Mr. William G. M. Mitchell, in a letter to the company's employees.

"We are pleased to inform you that we have been directed by our executives to make known to you the fact that we have decided to take the necessary steps to put an end to the strike," the letter read.

"We have had many conferences with the company's employees, and we have come to the conclusion that the only way to bring about a cessation of the strike is by the employment of strike breakers.

"We are now making all necessary arrangements to bring in strike breakers, and we appeal to you to do your best to prevent the employment of these men.

"We know that the strike is not popular, but we feel that we must take this step in order to save the company from the loss that would result from the continuance of the strike.

"We hope that you will co-operate with us in this matter, and we promise you that we will do our best to see that the strike breakers are treated fairly and justly.

"We are confident that the strikers will see the wisdom of this course, and we hope that they will be content with the arrangement that has been made.

"We are willing to make any sacrifice that may be necessary in order to put an end to the strike, and we trust that you will be willing to do your part in this matter.

"We appreciate the trouble that this strike has caused you, and we are sorry that it has been necessary to take this step.

"We are confident that the strike will soon come to an end, and we hope that you will all be able to return to your work as soon as possible.

"We are with you in every detail of this matter, and we hope that you will all be able to co-operate with us in order to bring about a cessation of the strike.
