DANIEL DE LEON, SOCIALIST LABOR PARTY CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR, DISCUSSES "THE ISSUES" OF THE CAMPAIGN. BY WHICH THE DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN PARTIES SEEK TO PILFER THE WORKING CLASS OF

THEIR VOTES IN ORDER THAT THEY MAY CONTINUE CAPITALIST MISRULE

A LETTER THAT EVERY WORKINGMAN SHOULD READ

To the State Committee of the Socialist Labor Party of New York.

Comrades .- Never before in the history of the land, has the ruling class of the country shown how necessary to the continuance of their misrule is a state of mental bewilderment among the working class regarding the political issues that affect the workingman. Accordingly, the air is full with the platform declarations of the Republican and Democratic parties on the "regulation of trusts," on "good and bad trusts," on the "tariff as a trust breeder," on "reciprocity," on "canals," on the "purchase of the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania by the Government," etc., etc.-a veritable sand and dust storm to blind, confuse, bewilder the workingman voter, and in his bewilderment pilfer his vote for the system of production that is corner stoned on the pilfering of his pockets. For this very reason, never before has it been so necessary for the workingman to hold fast as to a sheet anchor to the economic and political interests of his own class, to look at facts with a clear eye, and to judge them with a clear head.

Look at the men who run and who are the leading candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties. Who are they? All of them are men controlling or representing those who control some industry or another that employs vast numbers of workingmen.

Are these capitalists in the game of politics like Devery, for the sake of personal resentment, or are they there for their health? Surely not. They are there for the protection of their own industrial or economic interests. They are there because they are clear enough upon their class interests to know that masterhood of the public offices is essential to the continuance on which they fatten. What, then, is In his endeavor to raise his "wages," the this system of capitalism? What does workingman is, accordingly, engaged in it mean to the workingman? Let the census figures answer: In our own State of New York, according to the census of 1900, 22 per cent. of the workingmen employed in mechanical and manufacturing industries were out of work. And conditions were no better elsewhere. In Pennsylvania the number of the unemployed was 21 per cent.; in Wisconsin 27 per cent.; in Indiana 39 per cent.; while in Massachusetts the figure of the unemployed rose to 126,000, and so on throughout the land. As a matter of course, with this ever rising superabundance in the supply of labor, we find the wages, or earnings, of labor declining. The same census shows the workingmen fell, from $444 in 1890, to $437 in 1900. Furthermore, the same census tells us that, at the same time fell, his gross product rose, from $2200 in 1890, to $2450 in 1900. Finally, the census figures reveal the fact that, calculated by the piece, instead of the day, wages fell fully 33 per cent. in these ten year, leaving to the workingman barely 18 per cent. of his own product purchased at retail, as the pitance of his share in the fabulous wealth that he brought forth.

the workingman? They tell and prove

In the framework of the capitalist sys tem the workingman does not figure as a human being. He figures merely as a merchandise—just as beef, leather, or heads of cattle. Workingmen are told of their "wages." But what is "wages"? "Wages" is but a fumigated word to cor ceal a very ill-smelling one. The word concealed is "price." The "WAGES of the workingman" stands for the "PRICE of the workingman." When the workingman gets as "wages" $1 a day it means that the price of the workraising his "price."

Labor being, under this capitalist system, an article that is sold and bought in the market, like and alongside of beef, leather and cattle, the "price" of Labor is regulated by the identical economic law that regulates the price of beef, leather, cattle, etc. The larger the supply of beef and the lower the demand. the lower will be the price of beef; the lower the supply of beef and the larger the demand, the higher will be the price. Raise the supply relatively to the demand, and prices will go down; lower the supply relatively to the demand and prices will go up. Just now the price of coal is mounting upward. Why? Bethat the average annual earnings of cause of the scarcity of the article; when plentiful again, the price will go down. This law of prices Labor cannot escape that the earnings of the workingman | while capitalism lasts. While capitalism lasts, the price of Labor-wages-can be high only when the supply falls below the demand.

> Now then, under capitalism, the supply of Labor will ever be in excess, and in ever-increasing excess, of the demand. Improved machinery enables ever fewer men to produce ever more plentiful wealth. The improved machine displaces Labor. Every workingman displaced raises the supply of Labor above the de-mand, and inevitably lowers prices—the wages—of the working class. In other words, although Labor is the sole producer of all wealth, the share it gets of its own product must decline while the eapitalist system lasts and all the while, the capitalist class, which performs no useful labor whatever, pockets an ever larger share of the plunder. And we have seen that every time the workingman rises to counteract this result of the capitalist system of production, and demands a larger share of his own product, he is clubbed, shot or "enjoined" by order the evil? The workingmen have seen that the share of the wealth that they produce depends upon the supply of and the demand for Labor in the Labor Market, "Regulation of Trusts" leaves Labor out in the cold. Improved machinery privately owned, together with improved methods of production, will continue to displace workingmen, will thereby continue to raise the supply of Labor in the Labor Market, and wili thereby continue to lower the pricethe wages-of the workingman.

Can a high tariff, or a tinkering with it, bring relief? To-day, high or low, or no tariff leaves untouched the ills that afflict the workingman. The supply of Labor will continue to rise in the Labor Market.

Can "reciprocity," can "improved canals," can "reduction in taxes" improve matters? Not for the workingman. He remains a merchandise in the of Many Names," the "Social Dem-Labor Market, and as such his share in the product of his toll sinks, and must ever sink löwer.

Can the demagogic Democratic proposition to have a Democratic party government buy out the authracite fields bring relief? Is not the Brooklyn Bridge run by the Republican-Democratic government of New York City, and are not the wages of the bridge employees subject to the price of Labor in the Labor Market, the same as with any other private concern?

The fact stands out clear. The workingman can not check his decline toward the condition of the Coolie so long as capitalism exists; and capitalism will exist so long as the political parties con-trolled by the capitalist class receive the support of the workingman voter. The workingman has no choice but, either to submit to ever deepening poverty and ependence, or to overthrow the italist system of production, put an end of the industrial system of capitalism | ingman in the Labor Market is $1 a day. of the Republican and Democratic place to the social system that degrades him -men alike.

Can the "regulation of Trusts" mend to the level of a merchandise, and rear the Socialist Republic. The private ownership of the machinery of production must make room for the public ownership of the machinery of production, to the end that improved machinery shall not, as it does to-day, displace la bor, but that it shall displace hours of work, and to the end that, owned and operated by those who work, the wealth produced shall belong to the working class and not to the idle Republican-Democratic capitalist class. The Socialist Labor Party alone summons the workingmen, and shows them the way, to do this deed of manliness. Neither the Democratic nor the Republican party does. As their record proves, both work equally to uphold the capitalist system of plunder, even if they have to administer the rifle-diet to the workingmen-as the Republican Odell and the Democratic Flower have donein order to keep the workers in dumb subjection, while the spawn of the turple tude of both these parties, the "l'arty ocratic," alias "Socialist" party, has proved, by its long record of political corruption and log-rolling with both the Democratic and the Republican party, that the name of "Socialism," which it waives, is but the pirate's false colors waived to entrap the unwary.

In view of all this, I accept the nomination for Governor in this campaign, tendered to me by the State Convention of the Socialist Labor Party of this State. I shall do what in me lies to carry the gospel of emancipation among the disinherited of this State, and thus to urge on the day when, too clear-headed to be any longer used as political food for capitalist political cannon, the working class of this State will wipe out the system of misrule that renders them industrial food for the industrial cannon of the capitalist class.

Many times we have witnessed labor fakirs themselves running y in this city and State, and he appealed to the working class to support the Socialist Labor Party at the polls tion day as it is the only political party that represents the interests of the working class on the political field and, consequently, is the only political party that is worthy of their support.

"This is not a meeting of your pure and simple trade nuious," said the chairman, "that is called for the purpose of ratifying some nominee on the ticket of any of the different political parties of the capitalist class, but it is a meeting called for the purpose of spreading the light of new trades uniouism, called by a bona fide class-copacious trade union of the working class to endorse, to support, and to render every possible assistance to the only bona fide representative of the working class on the political field, the Socialist Labor Party."

Gilhaus then proceeded to prove that these so-called labor laws which are passed by the capitalist legislatures are nothing more or less than a sop thrown to the working class for the sole purpose of rendering them quiet, to once more make the workers docile, and to draw their attention from the conditions that

That we the members and friends of District Assembly 49 of the Socialist Trade and Labor Alliance in mass meeting assembled ratify the nominations of the Socialist Labor Party in this State and call upon the members of the working class to cast their ballot next election for the ticket headed by the outspoken foe of capitalism, capitalist "unionism" and the labor fakir-Daniel De Leon.

Gilhaus then introduced the candidate of the Socialist Labor Party for Governor of New York, Daniel De Leon, who was received by the audience.

De Leon said that he thought it was innecessary for him to address them after the enthusiastic manner in which they had endorsed the resolutions that had been presented to them.

He said that there are some who imagine that the feature of the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance is that its nature endorses and is endorsed by the Socialist Labor Party.

DeLeon then showed how the Socialist Labor Party of the United States would eventually drive the bogus Socialist paries of Europe out of existence, which would be replaced by an offspring of the socialist Labor Party. He showed how the uncompromising tactics of the So-cialist Labor Party of America were ably supported by the Socialist Labor Party of Canada, the Irish Socialist Republican Party, Parti Ouvrier Francais of France the Socialist Labor Party of Australia, and the unholy Scotch current which we hear so much about.

In concluding, De Leon appealed to the working class to consider and to weigh carefully the arguments of the Socialist Labor Party and to do their own thinking, and if they saw that the Socialist Labor Party was correct, then they should by all means support it at the ballot box on election day.

De Leon was followed by William S Brower, general secretary of the Socialist Trade & Labor Adliance, who traced briev the history of the S. T. & L. A. and showed how the policy of District Alliance 49 was changed by the Socialists gaining control of it in 1890, from endorsing the parties of capitalism to that of supporting the party of the working class, the Socialist Labor Party.

The meeting came to an end with the audience giving three cheers for the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance and the Socialist Labor Party.

Northampton, Mass., Oct. 3.-Phinias Parker, age sixteen, while idling near the office of the Florence Spencer Company, noticed the only attendant of the office, Edward Haven, son of the treasurer of the company leave the office for a moment, with the safe open. The true capitalist instinct to take advantage of circumstances to make a dollar by ingenuity, sobriety and thrift exerted itself so forcible in young Parker, that he quickly stepped inside and relieved the safe of $200 which lay

Instead of investing this capital as becomes a self-made man for the purpose of benefiting the laboring people and incidentally to add to the pile of capital, young Parker bought himself a new suit of clothes and then invited chum to go to Holyoke and attend a matinee at the opera house. Young Parker threw down V. which the bartender viewed somewhat suspiciously; whereupon Parker withdrew it and planked down a $20 gold piece, saying: "Well, if you don't like he looks of the bill, take it out of this coin. THE PHILIPPINES

Their Primitive Production and Great Resources a Gold Mine for American Capi talists

Special to The Daily People.

Holyoke, Mass., Oct. 3 .- Amos Breyer, a well known young German of this city, who joined Uncle Sam's army to liberate the downtrodden Filipinos from oppressive Spanish rule, has just returned after two years' service on the island of Luzon and, naturally, is prime full of information gained by experience in the far off land of primeval production.

Breyer said he had been very fortunate in being with a company of good fellows and officers, and consequently they had a rather pleasant ences. He says the Filipinos are very small in statue but very wiry and cunning and of unusual endurance They would come within fifteen feet of the American soldiers unnoticed by them, and when attacked, would disappear as if by magic. They would stab soldiers on duty frequently and never be caught in the act.

Breyer says these people are very ignorant and almost dogish in their orship of the priests and their president (the town's chief magistrate). On meeting one of these worthies they would fall upon their knees and kiss their hands. On seeing a priest or in passing a church they would fall on their knees some feet away and crawl up to them. Breyer says the priests big powerful men, and live in nice luxurious houses and drive about in a ort of dog cart drawn by four horses. If the priests or presidents want anything, they simply call in some of the Filipinos and ask them to bring in what is wanted.

If the Americans want anything in the line of provisions they have to buy it of the priests or the president, and these worthies call upon their subjects

The Filipinos mode of living is very primitive. They raise just enough rice (which is their staple food stuff) to keep them alive from year to year, also some potatoes, tomatoes and such other truck as they need. The rice they thrash out upon a tree stump which A bunch of rice is placed upon this stump and pounded with a stick until every grain is out. It takes an hour to thrash out a pound of rice. The loom is a clumsy looking wooden rig and the cotton strans are thrown through the warp from one side to the other skilful movements of the hands. It takes about two years to turn out a piece of cloth and another two years to prepare a warp.

Secretary Shaw evidently believes in

capitalist, but not a cent for the working class." He has come East, and is at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, where he can be in direct touch with the great financial interests of this city. He has given an order to release $130,000,000 reserve, which will permit the banks to increase their volume of business $130,-000.000. We remember the time years ago, when some farmers out in Dakota proposed the formation of a co-operative society to be launched with $50,-000,000 capital borrowed from the government at a low rate of interest. This was denounced as paternalism. We also remember in 1893, there was a demand all over the country for the inauguration of public works to relieve the unemployed during the hard times. That, too, was denounced as paternalism. But it is not paternalism to release $130,000,000 for the capitalist class.

rence to encounter in the newspapers the important findings of some man or comsion that has devoted a few weeks to the investigation of the condition of the working class in the United States or in England. Commissions or individuals from the United States visit England and upon their return herald forth through the press the marvelous results of their observations. From England to the United States similar visits are made, and upon the return to the old country, accounts are published that are calculated to add to the mystification and bewilderment of the hard-headed British

It is well to distinguish when perusing these reports the class of people who make them. University professors, whose incomes depend to a considerable extent upon the good will toward the colleges displayed by wealthy capitalists, are naturally not prone to discover anything that would bring down upon them the displeasure of those whose financial influence is such an important factor in the affairs of universities.

On the other hand, from committees of business interests, it would be absurd to expect that in their investigations they should find, or, if found, publish information that would tend to prove that there is anything fundamentally wrong with the manner in which industry is conducted at present by the class of which they are part. It is well also to remember that capitalism is internation al, that the capitalists of one country have money invested in other lands. Particularly is this so with relation to the United States. Not only are the working people of America submitted to the grind of building and maintaining the vast for tunes of the millionaires of the United States, but their labors are made more severe to the end of enriching stockho ers in American industries in England and on the continent.

The free trade in labor that permits of the bringing into competition with the American worker the cheap labor of every land forces the workers of the United States to a harder pace of toil than the workers of other countries and consequently the working class here is looked upon as the juiciest plum that exists for the pleasure of those whose main purp in life consists in squeezing wealth out of the hides of the industrious.

On account of the greater productivity of the American laborer, forced by the pressure of immigration, an investment in any established American industry is considered as a sure road to rapid fortune. These foreign beneficiaries by the sweat of American working men sometimes visit the States to see for them selves how the miracle of sweating gold in such profusion is accomplished. They ch profusion is accomplished. have no eyes for anything but that of gleeful admiration for the workers who rush at the fastest possible rate in order to provide luxury and pleasure for them and their class. And in their hearts the hope leaps up that they yet may find it possible to force the work people of their mative land to the same mad, hurried

As a means to the accomplishment of As a means to the accomplishment of that end they publish, for the instruction of their home labor, glowing accounts of how the workers of the United States prosper because of their blind devotion in sacrificing health and strength to the glory and honor of the American millionaires, the European nobility and foreign stockholder, who constitute in the capitalist doxology the salt of the earth.

American capitalists visit Europe occasionally for pleasure or business, and quite a few of them mingle a little useful service to their class with their pleasure or business. They take the opportunity to throw a little more dust in the eyes of the working class by pointing out advantages to be gained by pursuing any advantages to be gained by pursuing any way for the improvement of working class conditions, except the only way— that of abolishing the parasites and leeches who fatten upon labor's substance. Here are two specimens of re-cent investigations of labor conditions in both countries: "Interesting Inform g Information Gained by Pro fessor Gray-He Will Make a Re-

This is partly due to his This is partly due to his own shortcomings, for he is not so capane as the American workman. Cooperative societies are doing a great work in Eng-land for the toilers. The professor, we presume, feels the shakiness of his position when he lauds efforts that have been productive of no better results than leaving those who direct their energies through those directions worse off than the American laborer. He probably thought it necessary to explain why agencies of so great good could accomplish so little good, so he fell upon the old device: The English worker is not so capable as his American proto

The British workman may not be so capable as his American competitor, and who the American is, among the motley collection of all nationalities that form a great proportion of American working we find it difficult to determine. But one thing is certain, that, though in the mind of the professor and to suit his purposes (probably baiting his hook with apologies for slave-driving in order to catch a few of the million-dollar college hat are in the troubled waters of the Labor Question), the British worker is represented as some kind of a different animal, we find when he arrives here, and there are goodly numbers of him, that it is hard to distinguish him from the rest of the menagerie, and he per forms under the lash with as much alacrity as any.

We would advise the professor when he desires to unload the burden of his cogitations in the future to seek out that hoice collection of willing and cheerful liars who minister to the merriment of the horse marines.

About the same time that the professor unburdened himself, probably to preserve the balance in the gaiety of nations, a commission representing the British Iron Trade Association made a report in Engand of the results of their findings in their visit to the States.

In that report it is represented in bal derdash terms about the human factor, personal equation and such like elasticities, that the only way to get big profits out of the employment of workingmen is to use as few as possible at as high a rate of speed as they can be driven at. To put this method into operation a plan was suggested whereby the English mechanic would be given an opportunity to improve his position in life by hurry-ing himself to the grave.

Upon work that he now receives 25 cents apiece for making, a plan was proposed to him, through which, by working twice as hard as what he does at present, he would make two of the articles in the time that it now takes him to make one, and instead of the 25 cents that he now receives for the one article, he would get an opportunity to revel in riches like the American worker, by making two articles for 30 cents. The British workman looked the plan over and most respectfully de-

It was also represented in the report that the American worker finds it easy to obtain employment; that they do not live from hand to mouth, but that they are enabled to save money and arrive at a state of independence. And, to cap the climax of human felicity, the worker of the United States is accused of living under a political regime founded on democratic principles. No matter how hard he works, the American working man is supposed to die happy, so long as there is a demorcratic form of government that is carefully preserved by the watchful-ness of a millionaire Senate.

To all the other advantages enjoyed by the working class in America the commission adds two that will be quite interesting to those who keep a sharp ac-count of American industrial conditions. The first of these advantages is the encouragement and reward of workingmen's inventions. The other is the ease and facility with which good workmen can themselves become employers and capitalists. These last statements require no comment on this side of the

Both these reports are no doubt veruseful—to the capitalists. The report of the British delegation seeks to convey th impression that the highway to prosperity lays along the lines of r and more intense exertion, notwithstand ing that the speed at which we produc things to-day throws us into wretched ness periodically because of overproduc tion. The American professor, by his report, seeks to turn the attention from e central fact that the cause of the misery of the working class is the burder placed upon them by the idle and useless capitalist class and their armies of re-tainers, defenders and panderers, and to seek to divert the efforts of the workers along lines that will not be det-rimental to the robbery of the capitalists or of any material advantage to themselves.-Textile Worker.

Cooperative societies are doing a great work in England for the toilers. That they are a wonderful success is indisputable."

It will be noted in the above report that the trade union of England, no politics in the union type, is held forth as a model for the American worker. It states that the trade unions are able to accomplish more over there than are the unions here. Again, it states that cooperative societies are accomplishing much ng. Carroll Speaks to More Strikers and Stirs Up Things Generally.

Special to The Daily People. Ballston, N. Y., Oct. 3 .- Yesterday, Comrade Pierce and myself held a meeting in Stillwater, the headquarters for the strikers of the Hudson Valley Street Railroad Company. We patronized the "union buss" to get to the town, the street cars were running, but, of course, we would not ride on them. The power ouse of the street railroad company is located here, but it's a very small town. We did not have as large a crowd as in Mechanicville, still about 150 wage slaves showed up, and we spoke to them. Questions were called for, but no re spouse came. One man objected when I stated the average pay of the miner was less than $1.00 per day, so I told him we would not fight over the matter. I, perhaps, forgot that they were union men and, according to President Baer, they did get more than $1.00, viz. $1.01, good union wages. We sold several books and got four subscriptions for The Monthly People.

The fun actually began after the meeting when Comrade Pierce and I went to the hotel. As it was the only place we could find and there was no way to get out of the town, we had quite a meeting in the hotel. Questions and debates were the order, many of those present had been to our meeting and thought they would have some fun, but I am under the impression that we did not come out second best.

A young man was present who did not like to think that we were permitted to compare the free-born American citizen with the chattel slave. I was pounding away at him, when another man called him down, saying: "Mister, don't compare him with a nigger, he's meaner than any black man ever was. He is assisting the Hudson Valley Street Railroad Company to break our strike.'

I am writing this letter at Ballston, where we hold forth this evening. The street cars are running and, I notice, quite a few people are beginning to ride. The company has demonstrated that they have what the workers so often tell us, viz., "the brains," which they have manifested by stopping the little steamer which runs up the Delaware and Hudson canal. They must have bought it up. Money and brains count, but not for the workers. This will be pointed out to the wage slaves to-night.

When we arrived in town this morning, we asked for the president of the village, and was directed to a bank on the corner. I went up to the teller's window and asked for "Mr. Medbury." He is the cashier of the bank. I told Medbury my business, and he said: "Oh. 'the Labor Party'! Well, go ahead; only pick out a spot where it will not be liable to block the sidewalk."

"We're all workingmen," he said, as I started for the door. (Here would be a good chance for the "Socialist" party, for he is "coming our way"; of course, he is a Republican, but a little thing like that don't count with the Kangs.)

The Democrats are holding a county convention here and we have had some hot exchanges. One of the delegates got into an argument with me and did that Governor Flower sent the troops to Buffalo to shoot the switchmen into submision, and this delegate claimed to be a "union" man. He looked it! But his fellow delegate broke in and "Yes; that's right; don't try to talk to that man. Say! I know you! I heard you speak on Boston Common. You're all right, but you ought to help us knock out the Republicans first." He was told that we intended to knock out the Republicans ourselves; that as the Democrats were dead, we had no use for dead men; that the only live men they had were the few trust owners like Belmont, Jones, Nixon and Coler; and that only dead men would take stock in the Democrats smashing

We expect to have a good meeting tonight as the local papers have announced W. H. Carroll. he meeting for us.

Mechanicsville, N. Y., Oct. 5.-Since my report of September 22 I visited Mt. Vernon, a short distance from Yonkers. We had a successful meeting there. We sold four pamphlets and received one subscription to The Weekly People. Wednesday I was present at the section meeting in Yonkers. Thursday and Friday we were compelled to let our meetings go on account of the rain. Saturday I went to Peekskill. We had a hot time in the

This is the town, the comrades will emember, where the Kangaroos built the famous wall. Mr. Taber, their star performer in this place, was superin-tendent of streets and fought against the contractors who offered to build it for $500 under Mr. Taber's superintend-ence, as a circular, which they passed around, stated. It was built by day abor and cost only $189.11 and the town besides was in possession of a good substantial derrick. "That," the circular stated, "was a good practical demonstration of Socialism." "But" two days before election the wall fell down; "into the gutter" and the Kangaroo vote, together with their super-intendent of streets, landed in the same place—the place where they be-long. Mr. Taber is now making cigars and says he is out of politics.

Well, we opened up. Comrade Zolot explained the aims and object of the cialist Labor Party and the Socialist Trade and Labor Alliance, and was about to introduce me when a drunken Kangaroo (an old thirty-year German) interrupted, saying: "Mr. Zolot vas you not a scapt?" He stood right up to the front. Comrade Zolot called the attention of those present to the creature and, after explaining that he was no scab, and that the Socialist Labor Party was an organization that ex-posed scabbery, said: "Look at him; take a good look at the kind of men who support the Socialist Democratic party." This was too much for Mr. Homles, the Social Democrat who was elected by the Republican party as street commissioner, and then joined the Kangaroos. Mr. Homles came forward and led his comrade away, but not before Comrade Zolot had said: "There, fellow workingmen, is Mr. Homles, the running mate of Taber. There is the man I have been talking o you about. Come up here, Mr Homles and defend yourself." But needless to say, they hopped along. But yet, after all that, a lot of drunken cigarmakers, steeped in pure and simpledom, whom the Kangaroos had stuffed, caused us some trouble due to the fact that the police seemed to aid the Kangaroos; still we held out until 10.45 when the sargeant of police came and said it was getting late. We announced that we would hold forth on Monday evening at the same old stand, after I had called the attention of those present to the contemptible action of the police in taking a drunken rowdy to the corner several times and permitting him to come back in a few minutes. At any rate we had one man come up and say: "I want to join your party," and gave us his name and Sunday we met the chief of police or the street and got after him. He said he would see about it. Monday I notified the president of the village, and later in the day I met the chief while having a go with him, and an officer "Were you the came up and asked: man that was talking out here Saturday night?" I said "I was." "Well you're pretty gol-garned good at calling people down, ain't you." "I am glad you think so." I said. "Well, you want to be careful," he said, "you used profane language." "I beg your pardon, sir; I did not." "Well, don't try to tell me my duty," and he began to get warm. "You'll get locked up in some towns if you called the police down as you did Saturday night." "Yes, and you would have your buttons taken off in some towns if you dared to stand up before your chief as you have done here and say that you heard men swear in public and not arrest them, "It's not too late, yet," he I replied. said, boiling up again. "Well, I shall not try to prevent you—go ahead." At this point the chief walked away and left us at it and things grew warm until he said: "Well, excuse me, but there is a man I want to see," and he walked across the street and I was not arrested. When I got home to supper and told Comrade Zolot and described the cop he laughed outright and said "Why, that was Officer Burke. Taber the Social Democrat, appointed him, and he is a Social Democrat," When we went to set up our platform that night, long before the time men gathered, Comrade Zolot was cautioned to look out for himself. The Kangaroos were out in force with their pure and simple allies, but the police had received such a drubbing that they were on hand to do their duty.

The Kangaroos were supported in Peekskill by the News, an "independent paper." The editor gave it up last week, wrote a farewell editorial thanking all who stood back of the paper and gave their names, all prominent and wealthy Democrats. The New is a Republican paper now and they are booming the labor fakirs and the Social Democrats. I will mail you copies to prove it is another Daily People lie.

The Kangaroos lined up against a fence on the opposite side of the street Comrade Zolot came loaded. He tool up the pure and simplers and showed how they scabbed it on each. When he came to Gompers, the Kangaroos applauded for Sammy, but screwed up their faces when it was pointed out that when they endorsed Sam they were also endorsing Mark Hanna. Comrade Zolot hammered them for nearly one hour, giving names and States in such a precise manner, that those present were impressed that he knew what he was talking about. took the platform next and spoke on political parties. The old Kangaroo who was on hand Saturday was present and could not keep still. He shouted at Comrade Zolot: "You better go-back to Russia. I called the attention of the worker to the chap who wanted to keep for-eigners out. "Take a peek at him," I said. The poor Kangaroo said: "I vas not a pig," and the crowd roared. We closed our meeting and the crowd was well-pleased. W. H. Carroll.

rowd Stands in Doorways to Listen to Corregan-Big Meetings.

Special to The Daily People.

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 29.-Section Bridgeport has held four good meetings during the past month. September 14 Charles H. Corregan, of Syracuse, spoke in our hall on Main street. He laid down in plain language the process by which the working class is robbed. He was followed closely to the finish, and at the close many expressed their approval.

Thursday, September 18, a meeting was held at Bull's head, and despite the miserable weather, Comrade Corregan held the attention of 150 for an hour and a half, whilst across the stree men stood in doorways and on plazza's listening to the pounding given to this accursed system by the "little man with the big voice." Comrade Corregan closed his visit with us on the 19th, by holding a fine meeting just off Main street, at which a crowd of four hundred stood and drank in the truth of Socialism and enjoyed immensely the pounding given their false gods and "Labor" Mayors.

On the 23rd, Connolly gave us a treat and we had a packed house, the au-dience consisting of nearly four hundred and over fifty had to leave on accoun of not being able to get into the hall. It certainly was a revelation to that audience to hear the sound yet simple exposition of the cause of all the mis ery in Ireland, traced directly to the capitalist class, and to find in the simple plain spoken man before them the highest type of a patriot. He was received with round upon round of applause. Seventeen books and four subscriptions to The Workers' Republic were sold.

Our regular Sunday evening discussions will be continued in Pioneer Hall until the election is over.

Better Known as Glasgow "Socialism" -From The Workers' Republic, Dublin, Ireland.

The taking over by a large number of municipalities of various public services has given the middle class opponents of the working class another opportunity to mislead their dupes, an undertaking in which they are greatly assisted, consciously or unconsciously, by some so-dalled Socialists. These individuals have taken advantage of the more recent developments to give expression to that looseness of thought which is a part of their nature by calling municipal ownership municipal Socialism.

To illustrate the Socialist contention that municipal enterprise forms no part of Socialism I will state the condition of things as it appears to me in the town I know most about, viz. Glasgow, a city which, from the number of public services taken over by the municipality, has been called the first city in the kingdom. And the reader must bear in mind, that though the facts stated apply only to Glasgow. the lessons to be learned hold good for every other town in Britain that has entered the field of municipal ownership.

Speaking of Glasgow a writer on municipal management says: "A citizen of Glasgow may live in a municipal house. He may walk along the municipal street, or ride on the municipal tram car, and watch the municipal dust cart collecting the refuse which is used to fertilize the municipal farm. Then he may turn into the municipal market, buy a steak from an animal killed in a municipal slaughter house and cook it by the municipal gas, on the municipal gas stove. For his recreation he can choose amongst muni-cipal libraries, municipal art galleries. and municipal music in the municipal Should he fall ill he can ring up his doctor through the municipal telephone, or he may be taken to the municipal hospital on the muncipal ambulance by a municipal policeman. Should he be so unfortunate as to get on fire he will be put out by a municipal fireman, using municipal water. after which he will perhaps forego the enjoyment of a municipal bath, though he may find it necessary to get a new suit in the municipal old clothes mar-"A citizen of Glasgow is generally considered to be the richest in municipal institutions in the kingdom." He is credited with having a share of the municipal capital to the extent of about £100. How his breast must swell with pride as he walks about the municipal street with the air of a cap-Especially if he is idle, italist. has then plenty of time to look after his property and prevent its deprecia; tion. And how comfortable he must feel when suffering pangs of hunger, he is told he has plenty of municipal wealth, from which, however, he can-not realize what would buy him a penny loaf. It is quite unnecessary for nim to die of starvation; he can go to his municipal home (the work house) and be treated with the usual contempt by his municipal servants. This argument of the amount the citizens have in municipal investments is about equal to that of the "thrift" advocate, who tells us how much per head the workers have in saving banks, co-

The framing to the picture of Glasgow life given in the above quotation consists of the fact that there are still 31,000 one-roomed houses in Glasgow, in many of which families of six, seven and eight persons of both sexes eat, sleep and perform every function of family life. I know this is not peculiar to Glasgow. Every large city has its housing problem, but no place can equal in hypocrisy this city situated on that open sewer geographers call the Clyde, this city whose motto is: "Let Glasgow flourish by the preaching of the Word," and whose most honored citizen Lord Overtoun a' prominent Liberal and Christian, pays his men 19 shillings a week (Sunday included), this city whose councillors and officials daily conduct deputations from other municipalities over its various enterprises, and expatiates on the benefits derived by the citizens, but, it need scarcely be said, always ignore the slum dwellings and the districts that are tabooed by the insurance companies on account of the high death rate. That some good has resulted from municipal ownership no one will deny, but what must be borne in mind is that municipal enterprise and Socialism are two different things, and as long as any person, either through ignorance or self-interest, continues to use these terms as synonymous, so long will it be necessary for Socialists to expose the error. Socialism implies abolition of the wage system, and as the capitalist system is neither municipal nor national but international, so must be the system that will suc-In the majority of towns where the

Take our hospitals, for instance, no owned by every municipality. Had cholera, smallpox, or typhus fever been no more infectious than a broken limb, or rheumatism, it is doubtful if their ownership would ever become public, and the workers would have been forced to fight these plagues unaided. But when it was found that the em ployer, coming into contact with his workers not only became infected with the disease but spread it among his class, it became necessary (in the interest of that class) to isolate the infected as a preventative against an epidemic. Some sceptics may smile at this, but let them say why, if the above be untrue, the workers have to give subscriptions every year off their meagre earnings to keep up infirmaries, convalescent homes, etc. If these places would have been muni- to more successfully and vigorously cipalized long ago. And so with nearly all the public services. Exorbitant prices charged by private companies for impure water, gas, locomotion, etc., effect most severely the largest consumers—and the workers cannot be called the companies best customers. Immediately the shoe pinches the employing class an agitation for municipalization is started in the press and on the plat-form, "for the benefit of all sections of the community" and the working class voters are tricked into voting for some capitalistic red herring. And when the municipality asks for loans of money to take over any public service this same employing class has a safe investment for its surplus wealth-municipalities paying interest from 1 to as high as 7 per cent. In the year 1909 the amount of capital invested in municipal enterprise amounted to almost 300 millions.

But what are the conditions under which the municipal employes work? Do they receive what they are entitled to, and which under Socialism they would get-all they produce? speak of employes I do not mean town clerks at £3500 per annum, tramway managers at £1500, and gas engineers at £1400, but lamp lighters at 13 lings a week, bath attendants £1 a week and fifteen hours a day. are the wages paid to some of the corporation employes in Glasgow, and only recently the bath attendants were refused an increase in wages because the baths were not paying. The Glasgow municipality has also refused the trade union rate of wages to the blacksmiths in their employ. When a man has constant employ ment, even though the wages be low he will suffer many indignities before risking his job by fighting his employers, and the conditions under which he worked must have become intolerable when we find him striking against them. One would imagine that under this Fiablanesque and Clarion ese "municipal Socialism" friction be tween the workers and the council would be reduced to a minimum, while a strike would be a thing undreamt of. Yet in this "model" city of Glasgow strikes have taken place in severa municipal departments, while others are seething with discontent. But few weeks ago the cleansing department were out for a week during which the streets of Glasgow resembled a dumping ground. It is quite a common occurrence for a rise of 1 shilling a week to the workers to be refused and at the same meeting an official or head of a department get ar increase of £100 or £150 a year. course this state of affairs is due to the men in the council, but that again bears out what I have already said that municipal ownership is not for the benefit of the working class, but only progresses when the master class fine it to their own interest to municipalize some public service. To prove it is only necessary to point out that the Glasgow municipality (composed entirely of reactionaries) owned nearly all its present service before ever "stalwart" entered the council cham-

In Glasgow the men who have been sent to the council as reformers (some even call themselves, and have hoodwinked others into calling them, So cialists) make up a curious mixture When a motion to municipalize the drink traffic was made in the town council, a prominent member of the I L. P. moved an amendment in favor of public house trust, which body, he said, could manage it cheaper and better than the sunicipality, and this in spite of the fact that one of the planks on his programme was "The Municipalization of the Drink Traffic. wonder that at the last election he was returned unopposed. Everything has its price. Another of them, John Ferguson, voted in favor of giving tramway manager an increase of £150 and excused his action by saying that as Mr. Young had discovered a cure for glanders he thought him entitled to it. A year after the rise was given every car in the city was run by electricity instead of horse haulage, so the reader will see how valuable this "cure" is to Glasgow.

Yet another councillor, who gets his Socialism from the New Testa got in on a programme which said, in appealing for the shopkeepers' votes: "Every shopkeep-ing wage being paid. The shopkeepshould insist upon the livers' very existence depends upon the classes. If the workers are paid low wages they will not be in a position to purchase the same amount of food. clothing, boots, etc., as they could purchase were their wages say 30 shillings per week instead of 18 shillings as at present." This sponge on the working class holds forth at street corners and then puts round the hat for the collection. He has long stopped working so it may readily be seen he makes a good thing of it.

These then are specimens of the reformer brand we have here. Instead of recognizing that the municipal enterprise of the town forms no part of Socialism, they go round the country telling what a great city "municipal Socialism" has made Glasgow and how much profit has been made off the various services. What we require here are some councillors who thoroughly understand the position, and can tell the electors the truth after the manner of our French and Belgian comrades. those countries in the towns where the Socialists are in the majority the administration of the municipal services is carried on "with the betterment of the conditions of the workers always

And yet at a recent congress held by those Socialist councillors it was agreed to add to their programme a declaration "that all such municipal measures as they could now devise for the relief of their constituencies of necessity palliatives under the capitalistic system, and could not be re-lied upon to curtail to any extent for any legnth of time the capitalistic power; that they should therefore be viewed, not as Socialistic institutions but as mere expedients, through which accidents were as infectious as fever the working people might be enabled carry on the class struggle; and that under no circumstances should the workers rest content with municipal mprovements, which in the nature of things must be entirely inadequate and temporary; but that they should resolutely move onward to the conquest of all public powers, with a view to the entire uprooting of capitalism and the firm planting of Socialism." Only when we have Socialist councillors in Britain repudiating the term "municipal Socialism" and issuing a statement like the above will there be hope for the movement in these islands.

San Antonio S. L. P. Makes It Too Hard for Fake Socialists.

Saturday night last, however, we took a diversion. attending and "breaking up" the first meeting-held in the "open"-by the "Socialist"(?) party. Two of their speakers talked extensively (perhaps they were deaf) on nearly everything save Socialism and the class struggle. The first speaker, C. N. Hughes, delivered a middle class speech, telling how, under municipal ownership of "public utilities," service could be reduced to "consumers" and a "surplus" accumulated in the city treasury, etc. The last speaker, H. L. A. Ho'man, narrated some funny (?) stories which he's been spinning for the last ten years; said something about "classes" in society, but evidently, if he would have accidently hit upon the class struggle, he would not have known it. In the meantime we distributed a num-ber of our State Manifesto, contained in The Weekly People, and were surprised at the number in the audience who were "onto" him, many alluding to him as "Populist seiler" and some more severe claim to be identical with us, yet we were "none of them." So to "cut it short," Holman finally "ran dry," although he was being frequently "watered" by an attentive "comrade." But before he did so, an incident happened which gave us an opportunity to interrogate "pokito. Some one started to interrupt him and the crowd encouraged the fellow in it, but the speaker stated, quickly, "He would answer any question asked at the close of the speaking." So when he had fin-ished he immediately "vamoosed," and we thought we had missed our chance when suddenly he reappeared. And Comrade Frank Leitner put the ques-tion: "Mr. Holman, your handbill an-nounces that you will 'divide time' with any Democrat or Republican; now I ask: "why not the Socialist Labor Party?" He replied, "you are the least of our enemies;" to which Comrade Leitner. replied: "and you run from the least of your enemies?" Then seeing the bluff didn't work, he said, "I have too much respect for you, Mr. Leitner, as a man and as a Socialist to debate with you;" but as we were not seeking taffy, we crowded the grafters, Comrade we crowded the granters, oddress-ing the crowd thusly: "Fellow workers, I herewith challenge the Socialist party to a public debate, in which we agree to prove that said party is a fake Socialist party and does not represent the working class interests, but, to the contrary, would run the lightning of Socialism into the ground." Thereupon Holman raved, saying (which is their only argument): "When the S: P. has conquered and reigns supreme in the land, etc. (by fusion?) they will inscibe on their ban-ner: Mark Hanna, the father; Gompers, the son (if I mistake not, the first speak re culogized Gompers) and Daniel De Leon, the Holy Ghost." (No doubt Daniel De Leon has caused him and his kind to have many nightmares, perhaps that's where the "ghost" comes in.) Comrade Leitner was "warmed up" about now and said, pointing his finger at Holman, "Look here, Holman, I know you, I know your record as a Popand as an anarchist this juncture, although he did not have the excuse of having to "leave town," acted as if he had a "train to catch." saying, as he departed, "Write out your challenge and send it around," hoping thereby to convey to the crowd the impression that he did not intend to "crawl" thinking, perhaps, we would write and send it around to their headquarters and they could state they never received any and the S. L. P. had not issued a challenge. We will, however, "fool 'em" and publish it, providing we can get it in the papers. One of their "They members was heard saying: spoiled more votes than were made. A lamentable finish inded for the muchly"-named party, which proceeds upon the theory that their friends, the Democrats and Republicans, have been using the working class as voting cattle long enough, and now it's "their (the S. P.'s) time."

Industrial evolution has been divided into four stages called, respectively, the ramily System, the Gild System, the Domestic System and the Factory Sys-

These are useful divisions, but they are by no means absolute. They cannot be regarded as hard and fast divisions, for, in some conditions of society, we may get several of them working together. Thus, even in the form of industry at the present day, the dominant expression of which is the factory system, we get a great and strong survival of what was called the domestic system, and still se other survivals of an old gild sysm. But each of them has, at any rate, represented the dominant form of indussociety up to the present form. They appear to be the recognized steps by which the division of labor progresses, and social activity, on its industrial side, may be included in one or other of them.

(b) Slavery.—Not until the institution of slavery did the division of labor make my great headway. Slavery was the ource and origin of many of the separate and independent trades as they exist ro-day. The differentiation of labor was a result of a desire to get as much abor as possible out of the slaves whose applies products went to the aggranding. arpins products went to the aggrandized of up to a time which brings us within a comparatively short distance of our own. every grose the distinction between ag-culture and handicraft. Labor over and we what was required for the purces of maintenance was usually exceed in the making of luxuries, whence se the magnificence which Oriental pots and the Roman nobility enjoyed, a great Oriental empires rested on a modation of chattel slavery. The system appears in a more adanced form in Sparta, where we have an example of communist property in slaves, and again in Athens, where a comparatively small free population subsisted for the most part upon slave labor, and under the exceptionally good climatic conditions of the Hellenic peninsuls found an opportunity for the cultivation of the fine arts mid-the development of the acts mid-the development of the condition; they are static forces. ss and further development of the particular society. We shall now see the antithesis existing in the feudal system declared itself, and how it finally resulted in the destruction of that social system, for, as Engels says, in a sort of paraphrase of the Hegelian dictum concerning the rationality of all existing things, the chief value of all phenomena is the certainty of their disappearance. The next form assumed by the division of labor, the gild, was the beginning of the end of feudalism.

refined. The slave market at Rome, offered for sale men who were capable of The gild system began about the middle of the eleventh century. The reason of its coming into being was chiefly the deas scribes or private secretaries, and in the most menial, as tenders of cattle or tillers of the soil. Nothing was too high velopment of particular trades under the system of serfdom and the consequent increase in steady demand for certain commodities, which encouraged a more regular attention being paid to their man factures. This was accompanied by an increase in the food supply due to an improvement in the system of farming, longer periods of peace and the settle in the provinces, and large numbers of them toiled for the production of that next and reclamation of larger tracts of land. These causes encouraged spe-cialization and did away with the mere by-employment in manufacture of time spatched from farming. Hence, the crafts arose, and the gilds were organized for the purpose of regulating the work done in the craft. The prime necessity of gild work was excellence of quality, and to ensure this, a system of graded apprenticeship was devised. The result of this was a growth in personal relations as opposed to the relations of the feudal system which were based on the holding of land. But the gild itself contained the contradiction that was to destroy it. The gild master acquired more and more power, and the gild system continually grew in the direction of monopoly; in some cases certain families monopolized an entire craft in a certain district. None but members of the gild were allowed to practice a craft in a particular place, and hence grew the ele-ment which was destined later to destroy the gild. Coincident with the gild grew the merchant adventurers, and as trade developed, the merchant gilds arose, which, after a time, became

> d commerce as commerce. The distinguishing feature of the gild system was the combination of labor with a small capital. The gild master had a little money; he bought the material and, with his apprentices, made the finished product. This he sold directly to the cust very marked. The gild master worked as a rule in the shop with his men; there was no class difference between them at least, at first; but later as the gild masters increased their wealth and be came tyrannical, the apprentices and journeymen were often in sharp conflict stronger than the craft gilds, and estab-

It will be observed that the gild system greatly increased the effectiveness of the division of labor, established the crafts upon a firm basis and introduced a degree of technical skill which had hither been attained, at least, on such a scale and in such variety. It caused a growth in wealth and laid the foundations of a class which, by virtue of its control of commodities, was a dangerous rival to that class whose power was pased on land.

The domestic system succeeded the gild system, which began to give way about the sixteenth century in England. The master no longer manufactured directly customer; he sold the product to a middleman. Frequently, also, he bought the raw material from a middleman. This, of course, tended to increase the number of middlemen very greatly, and they became a mere money power, taking the risks of the market and speculating in the values of commoditi They were mere traders, having nothing to do with the manufacture of the commodities, but sucking sustenance from the workers. One effect of this system was the break-up of narrow local organizations of the feudal system. The cry of nationality arose with the expansion of the market, and the confined and restricted dimitations upon buying and selling were gradually abolished.

There is no necessity to go into the disadvanta s of the domestic system. But under it the standard of the work done by the crafts lamentably deteriorated, the conditions under which labor was carried on were frequently of the very worst, the comparative isola tion was a great destroyer of the social spirit which the modified communism of the feudal system had preserved from the ward expression of social life, in the shape of architectural and artistic monuments, was practically destroyed. It was a crude and unlovely period and is was, a crude and unlovely period and is absolutely undeserving of the praises which are bestowed upon it by the nar-row reactionists who attack the present system by speaking enthusiastically of the "much better life" of our fathers. The fact of economic moment in the lomestic system was the frank substitution of manufacture for exchange instead of manufacture in part for use. commodities were made expressly for the market and several proverbs are still alive which appear to show a certain un-derstanding of this fact; for example, the homely saying that the children of the shoemaker are always without shoes.

There was a sense of personal freedom, however, which the feudal system lacked, for the workmen were free as to their daily toil. The innumerable restrictions of the gilds were abolished and labor became a commodity, competing like all other commodities upon the open market. The master was no longer a shopkeeper or a merchant. He had lost what may be called his economic independence. He depended upon the middleman and the market, a market which was, by its expansion, slipping further and further away from him.

The next step was a comparatively The next step was a comparation easy one; it was merely to transform these disorganized individual producers into an organized effective industriel force. This was accomplished by the discovery of a new motive power, in the shape of steam. Henceforward, the fac-ory was possible, and a struggle was thereupon entered into between the old domestic system and the new factory system. This struggle has been carried on for more than a century, each year marking a definite increase in the power and strength of the new system. With the passing of the domestic system we come, practically, to modern times.

The factory system consists in the thorough carrying out of the division of labor. It wipes out the last vestiges of manufacture as a by-employment; it continually narrows the scope of human ac tivities and by concentrating the whole attention upon some detail of manufacture creates a class of mechanical spec ialists, whose united skill is devoted to the production of the unfinished commodity, no part of which any individual worker can claim as his own handiwork It destroys individual expression, and with it, all-incentive for artistic creation. But it is, undoubtedly, the most effective means which has ever been devised for the making of commodities. Its particular excellencies and drawbacks will be considered under another head.

We have thus cursorily examined the course of the division of labor which, arising in prehistoric times, has been the foundation of all progress and which in the factory system appears to have reached its culmination. But the modern system, also like all others, carries within itsself the hidden contradiction: from it has grown the new force which s destined, finally, to overthrow it, and this force, the antithesis of the system,

CORREGAN'S WORK.

The Little Giant Holds a Series of Telling Meetings in Connecticut.

Special to The Daily People

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 1 .- On Septem ber 25 Corregan was booked to speak in Bristol, but was prevented from olding a meeting by rain. September 26 he spoke on Court Square in Springfield (exchange for Berry) to a large crowd of listeners, amidst a drizzling rain. The audience stood to the last with umbrellas up, while Corregan held forth to them, soaking wet from rain. "If the audience can stand it, I can stand it also," he declared. Forty pamphlets were sold and The Weekly People distributed.

On September 27 he proceeded to Thompsonville, the most proletarian place in all Connecticut. The contrast class and the working class, is nowhere more striking than in this carpet weaving town. The miserable shantles rowing tale of misery and degrada-

Again the skies were opened and rain fell down on an already over-saturated ground; but that did not deter our brave little organizer from holding a meeting. The meeting had been well advertised by a sympathizer and a large crowd assembled—the whole to the explanation of that funny prosperity that always finds the few an leaves the many out in the cold. The audience appreciated the remarks and answered with hearty applause. The whole supply of pamphlets, thirtyeight, were sold.

Sunday, September 28, was a day of rest in Hartford, as it poured down in torrents just when the open air meeting, for which preparations had been made, should have been opened.

On September 29 Corregan proceed ed to New Britain and held there rousing open air meeting to an appreciative audience of between 500 and 600, and sold sixty pamphlets, the whole supply at hand. The meeting was a record breaker for selling litera-

When Corregan was warm, the Hartford comrades began to sell their literature. "What Means This Strike?" went like hot cakes. The whole supply of sixty was sold before Corregan had finished. We could have sold more than a hundred if we but had them along. Leaflets and papers were gone in a moments' no tice, stowed away in the pockets of the workers. No flying sheets of paper spoiled the beauty of the public square of South Manchester, Conn. It was great meeting and will bring results before long.

CHILD WAGE SLAVERY

The One Phenomenon Which Distinguishes Capitalist Society From Preceding Forms of Society.

BY OLIVE M. JOHNSON, Minneapolis, Minn.

Nineteenth and twentieth century capitalist society offers one phenomenon among others by which it may forever be distinguished from any other form of society that has heretofore existed. For little tots, of eight and ten, to work at labor that is breaking and malforming their tender limbs, prematurely ripening and ruining the faculties with which nature may have endowed themthat is a phenomenon which belongs distinctly to modern capitalism. Our early ancestors, whom conditions developed into hunters and warriors may be accused of "laying idly in the sunshine while women did the drudgery work;" but during no form of society previous to our own civilized era can the population be accused of lying idle while mere babes did hard and injurious labor. Child labor, there is no doubt, is to some extent as old as the human race, for, while tools were crude and labor power at some periods scarce, all available labor had then often to be pressed into service, but the work the little ones had to perform was nearly always of a nature that strengthened their physical capacities or developed their intellect. But otherwise is the object of child labor at the present time. Nor are the children made to toil because enough grown labor to produce the necessities of life is not available to-day.

In the last essay we pointed out that women were taking the places of men because their commodity, labor power, was cheaper than that of the men, and also because women are more submissive and easier imposed upon. Now, while this is indeed true of women, it is true to a still greater degree of children. Modern machinery is in many instances so wonderfully perfect and easy that in order to operate it all that is often required is but to turn a crank here or press a lever there, or to watch or feed the material to the machine beyond, a labor which children can perform. Now, as demonstrated in previous articles, the privately owned machines of production are operated only for profit, and this can be had only by withholding part of the products of labor. Hence, the cheaper the laborer the larger the profit. In this simple fact lies the secret of modern child slavery and its great prevalence, not only in the South-to which part of "our" domain the capitalist newspapers of the North that have been forced to take up the questions, it being so apparent and widely discussed, try to shift the problem-but in the entire United States, yea, in every capitalist country on the face of the earth.

Chiid labor is the one part of the social question of to-day that is arousing the most sentiment; yet I believe, from what I have heard and read, that generally it is as little rightly comprehended as any other phase of the labor problem. We shall at this time attempt a short review of its development during capitalism and see how it has come to be an institution upon which modern wealth production partly rests.

In reading Marx's "Capital" or Engels' "Condition of the Working Class," we learn how fearful was the conditions of the working class in England in 1844; the only capitalist country then developed. When we compare this period of early capitalism with some later one, it would seem as if the condition of the working class had improved with the development of machinery. We shall see that this is actually true, at least with relation to the employperiod of capitalist development. However, we are now again on a downward England at the outset of capitalism was an old and thickly populated country, so that, from the first, there were plenty of wage slaves ready to be exploited. The United States, being a new and undeveloped country with great natural resources, left the laborer at first more independent and hence the American working class did not have to pass through the same stages in the early days of capitalist development as did their English brethren.

Now, in the early days of manufacturing capitalism, before the machines were as perfect as they now are, there were hundreds of little things that the children could do to save mature and expensive labor. They could sew on ands and buttons, they had to move things from place to place and carry things from room to room. There were ever so many little things which neither required skill nor strength. But that was the time of small capitalism and scattered ownership of the tools; hence, it was also the days when the trades union movement was at its height, and in fact the only period in its history when it was at all effective. for at that time the economic unions did force some important concessions from the master class and unquestionmanaged to raise the average standard of the proletariat. Again, in those days the capitalist had not as yet gained full power of the government; but had, so to say, one hand engaged in its fight with the landed class, therefore, in order to win the working class on its side, it had to pass ome very important philanthropic la-One, and probably, the most important development of machinerywhich was thereby forced forwardwas the law curtailing child labor. "Necessity is the mother of invention" is an old adage, and the necessity of the capitalist to grind out profits has forced on more than one great invention when cheap labor was not obtainable. A short while ago, when passing through the workrooms of the National Biscuit Company in this city I was perfectly astonished to see crackers, cake and candy actually "walk," that they passed from hand to hand from provision was made so that persons of they passed from hand to the they passed finished articles were safely put away the necessary examination or had a high in the store-room. I could not help thinking what an enormous army of sity if they were well fitted for the little children would have been required there had not that system of automatic motion been so thoroughly perfected.

But, while the invention and improve ment of machinery thus did away with the former occupations of the very small children, it, on the other hand, also commenced to react on the top, so to say. With the development of machinery, skill and strength were also made superfluous and the head of the family was often turned into a tramp and idler. Then women had to seek employment in order to help to support the family; later the turn came to the younger men and women, and finally again to the children. The more machinery is perfected under capitalism the larger will be the number, and the younger the age of the children that will find their way the factories, mills and stores, to have their tender bones and muscles ground into profits for a few capitalist idlers. While the improved machines have made the children superfluous at their former employment, now, in turn, the machines and the children combined are making the grown members of society, as far as possible, superfluous. The price of labor power, or in other words, the average of the working class, has decreased from the amount necessary to support the individual. The children are becoming a sort of an investment to their parents and are often educated with a sort of a view of interest on value advanced. Such is the degrading influence of capitalism on the public mind. This fact is noticed by the philanthropic opponents of child labor, and they usually lay the cause of the evil to the drunk citizens of a generation ago Miss Jane Adams, of Chicago, speak ing at the recent employers' and em-ployes' convention in this city, on "The Social Waste of Child Labor," said among other absurdities, "that the State which educates its children has a right to pass labor laws so that its future citizens are not allowed to be made ples or stunned in their growth." At the bottom of such a statement, of course, lies the ridiculous notion that the one great enemy from whom a child need protection is its own parent, and that the one to give such protection is the It positively cannot enter into a capitalistically nurtured mind that the members of the working class dearly love their children, and often make far great er sacrifices for their little ones capitalist parents are ever called upon to make. As these well-dressed and well-fed "labor friends" have in the past attempted to set sex against sex, so it verily looks at the present time as if they are going to proceedunconsciously-to set child against parent and vice versa. The State protect our rights as a class whether as men, women or children!

enness or laziness of the parents, while they fail to perceive the economic under current that has made drunkards, idlers

and tramps of the industrious American

The working class must realize that as long as the State is a capitalist State, so long will it look primarily after the interests of the capitalist and not the working class. Miss Adams also took occasion to thank the labor organizations represented. "because they had secured laws prohibiting child labor in twenty-two States of the Union." Twenty-two States out of forty-eight, what a subject for congratulation! And then, ten to one, if we closely examine this list, the majority of them will be found to be States whose industrial development is such that child labor is not much quired. Furthermore, she said nothing about how in many out of this "great" number the laws are totally ignored by the capitalists and never enforced by the authorities. Again, a most efficient way for the "law-abiding" capitalists in the twenty-two States to evade these philanthropic laws has of late proven to be the simple way of shutting down their factories and leaving the inhabitants de-pendent upon them for a livelihood to starve, while the capitalist move their into one of the remaining twenty-six States where they can operate them without the interference of law. So the capitalists can well enough afford to allow the labor unions even twelve more victories for congratulatory purposes, and yet run their factories to suit themselves and at the same time remain "law-abiding" citizens.

The influence of capitalism has thoroughly saturated our public school system, whether by well laid plans or by instinctive action is not material; the re-sult is the same. The Minneapolis schools are considered the standard schools of the United States, and certain it is that, from kindergarten through to college, they are a thorough reflex of our highly developed system of capitalism. In the lower grades much time is spent in teaching the children to be attentive and to pass through a certain routine. Again, to make nimble fingers has become part of the system, and the neat and pretty things made by paper and twigs that the little ones bring home hows the system to be a success.

Throughout the entire school term sham patriotism and religious awe is stuffed into the children to a great extent. Every effort seems to be used to prune every item of individuality and to substitute therefor a well laid and preconceived opinion of some "great mind" into the channel of which all these lesser ninds are supposed to run. It may sound like an exaggeration when Socialists make the assertion that the university of the present day, aside from being a social club for the wealthy, is a mere capitalistic institution; but I have learned of a person whose actual experience goes to demonstrate the fact An acquaintance, learning from the Uniis, on sliding boards and dumb-waiters versity of Minnesota catalogue that a mature age, even if they had not passed school diploma, could enter the univerplication on the proper day to the proper committee and was refused entrance on the ground that this provision applied only to persons employed at some special branch of work, such as mechanical pursuits of various kinds, teaching, office work and the like, for which they wished to become better fitted. In other words, the University of Minnesota is not an institution of learning for persons, at least of the working class, desirous to educate themselves with the mere fact of higher mental cultivation in view, but it is an institution where wage workers may ba better fitted for their employment so that they make better wage slaves of the mas-

In short from the kindergarten through to the college, the merchandise labor power is developed for every branch and walk of life. In the primary grades are developed nimble fingers and submissive minds, whose possessors will make good machine tenders; in the higher classes, the wage workers are fitted for the higher branches because the capitalists have degenerated into a useless set that can do nothing for themselves.

However, under present conditions this educational system is the only practical one, for after all to get a job and be able to hold it is the highest aim and ambition of old and young, so to be fitted therefor it is of course desirable. So the worse about the present school system is by no means what it does for our children: what it does not do for them is infinitely worse.

Aside from the millions of children that toil away their school age in mills and factories and are denied even the rudiments of knowledge, there are yet thousands that make application in the primary grades and are barred for lack of room. With 30,000 children thus kept out of school in the city of New York alone, the figure will swell to monstrous proportions before it has taken in every large city in the Union, where half ses-sion or no session is the lot of many children. This overcrowding of the schools always happens in the workingman's districts; the capitalist's children have plenty of room and usually attend private schools or have private teachers at home, Statistics show that child labor is on a tremendous increase and investigations show that the conditions surrounding these unfortunate children are steadily getting worse. No amount of law, while the capitalists who profit by child labor are in control of the government, will or can eradicate or even check the evil.

The children, again according to Jane Adams, "are entitled to protection and just opportunities," and to that we certainly agree; but we most heartily disagree with the lady in desiring or even allowing this protection to rest with the capitalist State, the backbone of which are the very capitalist exploiters of our children. The only legislation that can be at all effective for the working class, in this or any other matter that concerns it, will bt legislation enacted by the working class itself through its own political party-the Socialist Labor Party.

Arbitration at best is an armistice in which the opposing forces of capital and labor confer about the terms upon which labor surrenders to capital.

Socialism strikes at the root of the problem by demanding that the profit system be abolished by erecting in its place the Socialist Republic.

The Socialist knows that the present system of production is unequal and unscientific, so has no patience with reform palliatives that seek to obscure the real issue.

WE SHOULD STUTTER!

Before us lies the semi-annual repor of the national committee of the "Socialist." alias Social Democratic party. It is too long a document to reproduce a this place. It is, however, valuable enough to reproduce in full elsewhere on some fater day. In the meantime a foretaste of its contents will justify the estimate that the document is invaluable as a homege to the soundness and wisdom of the Socialist Labor Party.

The report sets forth that the stability of the said "Socialist," alias Social Democratic party is threatened. And it explains that "the most serious danger lies in the questions of principles and tactics," seeing that "organizations in new States consist of elements inexperienced in the philosophy and tactics of the international Socialist movement," which "leads to political expressions, platform, and party tactics which conflict with Socialist principles and practices and which are essentially middle class." These few passages are a sample of the lugubrious document, which admits more-over that since their "Unity convention" their party has, so far from being united. presented the aspect of being hopelessly divided against itself.

We should stutter! We said so at the start. It is now proved at the end. Nor could it be otherwise. And yet the document is interesting; it is fresh. It is all that by reason of its mixture of puerility and crookedness.

It is puerile for people who objected to the "tyranny of the Socialist Labor Party" and who claimed that "millions of votes could be gathered for Socialism by new tactics," to now complain that the votes have not materialized and that "untyrannical policies and tactics" lead but to political bankruptcy. On the other hand, it is crookedness to have the mplaint against "unphilosophic taccomplaint against united ities" proceed from a set of men such as

The child of struggle, its struggles will never be ended until it has broken wide breach in the capitalist wall for the working class to march through to its deliverance. Consequently the S. L. P. will ever present the aspect of the ading column amid the foes-often hidden from sight by the smoke, eve bleeding, ever and anon seemingly undone, and ever reappearing with firm tread pursuing its destination.

On the other hand, the "Socialist;" alias Social Democratic party, like all such concerns will prove that "dupe" and "knave" are ever reverse and obverse of the same medal. They will start get tangled up in their own meshes and n find fault with the conditions that ed them to flare up temporarily; and finally go to smash-as all lie inevitably does.

With the nation as the stage, the silly portion of the public as the open-mouthed audience, and the suffering anthracite coal miners as the lurid Bengal fire, whose burning up throws a glamor on the scene, a personal political duel has been going ou between Hanna and Roosevelt-Hanna to oust Roosevelt from the next Presidential race, Roosevelt to keep his seat. The latest inci dent in this duel was the late scene in Washington where Roosevelt frowningly appealed to the coal operators and the officers of the Union to settle the coal strike. The anthracite coal strike was not

Hanna's first move. Indeed, it was no move at all, or "thrust," on the part of Hanna in his duel with Roosevelt. The anthracite coal strike was merely a financial manoeuvre on Hanna's part. With anthracite far below the demand, a market would be opened for Hanna's bituminous coal. Good grounds for a strike are always on hand. The miserable wage, the still worse environments under which the miners work, are ample ground on which to strike, and strike hard. Both wage and environments are as bad in Hanna's as in Baer's mines. If resistance to such hard conditions should justify a strike at one mine, it certainly should justify similar proceedings at all others. But that, of course, would not have suited the Hanna plan. To profit by a strike in the anthracite region, the bituminous regions must go on producing. Accordingly, Hanna's lieutenant on the Civic Federation, John Mitchell, saw to it at the recent Indianapolis convention of the miners that the strike should not extend to the bituminous fields. The plan succeeded. Aided by the Hanna coal operators, who check off the strike assessment of their miners the anthracite miners have held out, and bituminous coal tripled in price. While Hanna's financial manoeuvre was being executed with typical capitalist ruthlessness and the typical capitalist false pretences of love and affection for the workingmen, his political duel was going on, with varying success, but. must be admitted, with the scores in his favor, on the whole. On the whole, of them, or both, seized upon the coal strike situation. Whichever of the two started the move, Hanna comes out ahead by a large majority—and the illstarred miners have to pay the piper. If, the coal operators having accepted the terms of Hanna's labor lieutenant Mitchell, Roosevelt had appointed an ar-

Hanna was crowding Roosevelt into a hole. In the course of this duel, either stuck, whatever the decision: -if the decision was in favor of the miner: . Roosevelt would never receive the nomination for President. A decision that could not but fly in the teeth of all the principles of capitalism would effectively array against Roosevelt all the capitalist forces that dominate Republican conventions; -if the decision was in favor of the operators, Roosevelt's presidential boom would be equally shattered: Hanna would see to it that his labor lieutenants would raise the hue and cry against "a man so utterly oblivious of the rights of Labor that he appointed a committee hostile to the workingmen." A persistent and plausible cry about "organized labor's" hostility rarely fails of its effect with politicians.

On the other hand, if the coal operators declined the terms of Hanna's labor lieutenant Mitchell, Roosevelt would be stuck from another quarter. Whether he backs down or not, whether he conous M. Ballard Dunn, known to our venes Congress or not, and whatever, if convened, Congress may do, Roosevel is in hot water: he either renders himself still more ridiculous than he is, or himself kicks his Presidential boom to

> Who manoeuvred Roosevelt into this predicament?

If, in "ways that are dark and by tricks that are vain," learned by him from the Chinese stokesmen with whom he displaces American labor on his ships, Hanna engineered and lured Roosevelt into the performance of the 3rd instant, the trick was certainly masterly:

If, as it is equally possible, Roosevelt's own "strenuous" tom foolery is respon sible for this move of his to settle the strike, and end the "intolerable situa tion," then he dug his own grave, and Hanna has the credit for quickly having availed himself of the opportunity by posting his labor lieutenant Mitchell on the proposition to make.

In the meantime, while this duel for practical preferment is going on, Labor bleeds, played like a foot-ball by capitalists and their labor lieutenauts.

OUTDOING ITSELF.

The Democracy of this State in con ention assembled outdid itself. All previous Democratic performances in demagoguery become as nothing to the performance of this State convention. The following is its fly-paper declaration on the coal strike:

"We advocate the national ownershi we advocate the national ownership and operation of the anthracite coal mines by the exercise of the right of aminent domain, with just compensation to owners. Ninety per cent. of the an-

THE HANNA-ROOSEVELT DUEL. thracite coal deposits of the world being in the State of Pennsylvania, national ownership can but be in the in-terest of the whole people.
"Fuel, like water, being a public necessity, we advocate national ownership and operation of the mines as a solution of the problem, which will relieve the coun try from the sufferings which follow between labor and capital in the anthracite mines. This course will insure peace in the mining regions and remove the cause for differences, leading not only to suffering, but oftimes to loodshed and insurrection. lieve the consumers of coal, not only in this State, but throughout the whole country; insure steady employment and compensation to labor; transfer children from the mines to the schools insure, strengthen, and preserve the stability of the business interests and popular institutions of our country hatever differences of opinion may exist over other propositions of public the propriety of that policy as applied to anthracite coal mines must apparent to every citizen."

No important reason why the anthra cite coal mines should be nationalized fails to apply to other industries. And if the Democracy claims that other industries are not trustified, what of those that are?

Why not nationalize the Cotton Bale Trust? Is it because the concern is mainly owned by Democrats that the farmers are justly to be bled by that Trust beyond the point of endurance?

Why not nationalize the traction lines Is it because the concerns are mainly owned by Democrats that the public may be harried, run over, and packed like sardines in transportation?

Why not buy out by the State the scores of concerns in this State in which the operatives are slowly ground to death by low-wages and utterly unsanitary conditions? : Is it because in the instance of these concerns, they being wholly within the State, such a declaration would be altogether too practical and practicable, whereas, in the instance of the anthracite beds, they being located beyond the tackles of this State, all declarations concerning the buying out of them are beautifully vaporous?

Are these the reasons why "the pro priety of a proposition to buy out, as applied to the authracite coal mines, must be apparent to every citizen"?

AMERICAN LABOR AS MANURE FOR EUROPEAN ARISTOCRACY.,

The cable despatches announcing the birth of what in time will be the tenth Duke of Manchester at Tanderagee Castle, County Armagh, together with the ringing of church bells at Kimbolton. the present Duke's English seat, in a celebration of the occasion, simultaneously reopens a vista of the past, and gives a peep into a vista of the future.

About twenty-six years ago, the eighth Duke of Manchester—the dilapidated scion of the dilapidated dukedom of that name-married the American heiress Consuelo, a daughter of the Ravenswood, La., capitalist Antonio Yznaga del Valle. Her dower was a cold $3,000,000. Of course, not in cash: that would have been little, comparatively, and would have been dissipated in less time. The dower consisted in a Three-million-law-given power to drain the working class of America. And it did. The drainage drew from the mines, railroads and factories a manure that caused the parks of the dukedom of Manchester to revive. its game to spring up anew, and the sap of which rose into the belfries producing new bells to celebrate the happiness of the Duke. Twenty-four years later these bells were again called into violent requisition. The son and successor of the eighth Duke-the ninth Duke of Manchesterng the agricultural-matrim instincts of his father, secured from the same quarters fresh manure for his dukedom: he married another American heiress, Helena, the daughter of the Cincinnati, O., millionaire Eugene Zimmerman. Her dower was a colder $5,000,000. Like the previous dower, neither was this in cold cash. It was again a law-given power to drain the working class of America, this time with a five-million suction. And it did. From all parts of the nation the stream ran; and, drawing its sustenance from the drainage, the dukedom of Manchester flourished apace—to the tune, of course, of declining earnings for the workers of America, whose labor secreted the rich manure on which the insect Manchester Duke Vulgaris thrived and grew fat.

Such is the vista of the past. It allows a peep into the vista of the future. What is to be the tenth duke has just been born. Will the insect decline? Not if Democratic-Republican political power continues. On the contrary. If that power continues, the insect in this third generation will thrive still better. Since his grandfather's days, even since his father's days, the earnings of the wealthproducers of America have tumbled down perceptibly. If the grandfather could fatten on what he extracted from American Labor, if the father could grow still fatter on the still greater plunder of the American workingman-how rosy must not be the future of the recently born tenth Duke to-be, when he will be old enough to wed, in his turn, some American heiress! No wonder the church bells of Kim-bolton ring out in merry glee.

But church bells have not always been truthful prophets. Who will venture to deny that between the time of birth and the age of marriage, the working class of America will not have got tired of figuring merely as manure for a parasite class, and that, as their predecessors of American Revolution memory, they may not have thrown off their backs both the foreign parasites and his native satraps?

Further evidence of the rascality and corruption of the "Social Democrats" will be found in our correspondence column in the communication from Jer. O'Fihelly of North Abington, Mass. There the "Social Democrats" voted in the Republican caucuses for notorious labor skinners. They did this in violation of the law forbidding voters to vote at more than one caucus. Thus, to the crime of corruption they have added the crime of repeating. It is this pestiferous crew, which, we are informed, represents the working class and international Socialism in this country, Workingmen, repudiate the imputation that you are corruptionists-with no more honesty and decency than the lowest ward heeter who barters his vote for drinks. Out upon the scoundrels. Expose their dirty record when and wherever possible and bury them out of sight on election day, under an avalanche of Socialist Labor Party

A few days ago the Western railroads issued reports showing large increases. Last Friday, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers met in Chicago, and decided to demand a 10 per cent. increase on twelve roads The engineers assert that the tonnas of freight trains has become so buch neavier that there is no compa with the work they had to do when the schedule now in force was adopted Locomotives are larger and the hours men are required to remain duty make theirs a trying task, they All of which goes to show that railroad reports, like capitalist statistics, are made to order.

The value of capitalist statements reflected in the railroad reports recently These reports, in spite of threat ened strikes on Western railroads for an increase in wages equal to those paid before the reductions of 1893, and in spite of the investigations of capitalist writers, showing that operating expenses are being decreased at the wage expense of the workers-these reports calmly and deliberately tell of a general increase in the wages of railroad workers. Any one at all familiar with corporation book keeping knows that it is a legerdemain worse in its insidious results than the lack art of the middle ages. Those figures are cooked up for the purpose of justifying a resistance to the increase de manded, and to perpetuate the system of intensified labor at low wages now in ogue on the railroads.

Senator Dolliver says trusts are doom ed because they are overcapitalized. Dolliver should observe Germany. There a crisis recently wrecked many overcorporations; but it did not capitalized end them. The water was squeezed out -as were the small stockholders-and the whole system of trusts was placed on a sounder basis, in fewer hands. Now they are flourishing as they never did before. Again, Dolliver cannot fail to have noticed that industrial wrecks ar not infrequent in small production. That periodically there is a crisis produced by overproduction and that such a crisis is invariably followed by retrenchment and concentration. If Dolliver has noted that, the fact cannot have escaped him that failure in any phase of industry is followed by a rehabilitation on an ever larger scale. And so it is and so it will e with trusts. Trusts are here to stay and grow.

It now transpires that the arrange ments recently concluded between the warring English and American tobacco trusts practically create a new and formidable international trust. The new British American Company is owned two-thirds by the Consolidated Tobacco Company (the official title of the tobacco trust of this country), and one third by the Imperial Tobacco Company of England. Under the new company, the Im-perial Tobacco Company retires from the American field, not only in the United States, but Cuba, Porto Rico, the Hawaiian Islands, and the Philippines while the new British-American pany takes over the entire business of the Imperial Company and the Consoli dated Company, in all foreign countries and in all the colonies of Great Britain including India, Canada, and Australia This new international trust offers an effective argument against tariff reform. When corporations of different companies become practically one, where is the competition that tariff reform would promote to come from?

Boston, Mass., Oct. 3 .- The reception to Comrade Connolly in Fancuil Hall on Wednesday evening was a success in it made the Kangaroos howl.

Despite the wretched condition of the treets, and the game of ping-pong which Jupiter Pluvius was playing with the clouds overhead, the old "Cradle of overhead, the old Liberty" was filled before the meeting During the meeting twenty-five subscriptions were obtained for the "Work-ers' Republic," and about two hundred pamphlets were sold. A collection netting over $33 was also taken up. Comrade M. D. Fitzgerald, of Boston called the meeting to order and intro-duced Joseph F. Malloney as chairman. The chairman addressed the audience in his usual forcible, convincing manner for twenty minutes before introducing the first speaker, Comrade M. T. Berry our candidate for governor.

Comrade Berry held the attention of the audience for a considerable time, explaining the position of the Socialist Labor Party in this campaign and exposing the crookedness of the spellbinders of the old parties, not forgetting the poor, muchberated Kangaroo, for whom Comrade Berry, not only because of his honesty and earnestness, but because of his bit-ter experiences with them as well, entertains about the same regard as His Satanic Majesty is reputed to have for holy water.

It should be noted that the Scaudinavian Socialist Singing Chorus furnished an excellent musical trent by their rendition of two selections, one in English and one in their own tongue, which were liberally applauded. .

A poem of welcome written by Com-rade French was then recited by Fred Boyle, of Revere, at the conclusion of which a number of Trishmen in the audience took up the hearty cry of Mille Failte' ("A hundred thousand welomes") as Comrade Connolly arose to address them.

fluent and convincing equal to our ex-

Cheers greeted the representative of the class-conscious Irish working class.

As a speaker Comrade Connolly proved pectations and delivered a fine speech, nterspersed with telling points and witty

He declared that the I. S. R. P. recognized in the S. L. P. of America the only bona fide Socialist Party in this country, and urged the audience to support it at the polls and thereby strike an effective blow that would redound to the benefit not only of the working class of America but of the old country as well.

At the conclusion of his speech, during which he was frequently applauded, someone asked him what a "crimes" or 'coercion" act meant to the Irish working class, to which he quickly responded: 'Analyze an American injunction and understand what it means to the American working class and you have the size of an Irish coercion act." Though there were many sympathizers of the Home Rule and various other Irish movements present, if any were not yet convinced by Connolly's arraignment of the Irish "fakir" politicians, they apparently did not have the courage to ask im any further questions.

At this point the poor Kang did his usual little "stunt" of opening his mouth and putting his foot into it. It certainly was amusing to Comrade

Connolly to witness the display of stupidity and ignorant malice on the part of Mr. Spero and his little coterie of East Boston Kangaroos who were in the rear Your correspondent, in speaking recently with a New York comrade of the bewildered state of mind of certain Bostonians, was met by the witty remark: "Perhaps their mental bewilderment is a result of the configuration of your Boston streets." In like manner it may be said of East Bostonians of the Spero type that the preponderance of fog over gray matter in their cerebral cavities is result of the prevalence of foggy weather on "Noddle Island."

As an illustration of the mental caliber of these gentry may be mentioned the first questioner, who didn't know the name of the S. T. & L. A. and wanted to now if the Party endorsed the action of the S. L. P. After Comrade Malloney had jollied him a little to jog his memory he stammered out: "I mean your vat it is, de central body, your S. L. P., your trade union movement."

The question was directed to Comrade Berry, who waved the wand of his eloquence over the chattering group, and lo, Presto! Chauge! the Kangaroos were transformed into a troop of monkeys. The Davis cigar and other chestnuts vere sprung by Spero and his assistants, who were disposed of by Comrade Maioney in his inimitable style, much to the amusement of the audience.

CONNOLLY IN HAVERHILL.

He Addresses an Enthusiastic Audience of Irishmen on Washington Square.

Haverhill, Mass., October 3.-James

Connolly, the famous Irish agitator, founder of the Irish Socialist Republican Party, and Editor of the "Workers' Republic," of Dublin, Ireland, spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience on Washington Square, last evening. Michael T. Berry, Socialist Labor Party candidate for Governor, presided, and after a few introductory remarks, he introduced Connolly.

Coupolly, who is an eloquent speaker, thoroughly posted on Socialist and economic questions, both in Ireland and in America, spoke for over an hour on the situation in the "ould land," pointing out to the audience present, especially those of Irish birth or descent, the absolute necessity of casting their ballots for the only Party of the working class in America, the Socialist Labor Party, and thus strike a blow for freedom, not only in America, but in Ireland as well. The speaker pointed out how utterly useless were the attempts made in the past to better the condition of the Irish every sense-a howling success-that is, people, the working class, by such middle proprietorship, etc. There is but one thing that will help the Irish working class; that is the esablishment of the Socialist Republic. Copnolly told his audience the story of how the Irish "patriots?" like John Redmond, go hand in hand with the Irish capitalists like John D. Crimmins, misleading the working class Irish in both He told the Irishmen who were present at the meeting "that they ought to have other use for their money sending it over to Ireland to keep a lot of well-fed Irish politicians in the Brit-ish House of Commons." In an eloquent appeal he called on the workers of every land, especially those of the Irish race, to unite with the Socialist Labor Party, thich in America stands for the same ideal as does the Irish Socialist Republican Party in Ireland, and thus strike the blow in the only way possible which will give to the Irish working class the Freedom for which they have hoped and fought and dreamed of for centuries When the sea-divided Gael is one in name as well as fame." that there would be more sense and consistency in saying "the Earth is the other, Labor is the father and Capital is the child." B. J .- I begin to think?

U. S.-I hope so. Labor being the father, does it not consistently follow that he has the right to control, spank direct, influence, protect, command and restrain his child?

B. J .- "It do." U. S .- Far from being brothers, Labor and Capital are to-day deadly enemies. This enmity does not grow out of the true relationship of the two, but because of the fact that the so-called shrewd, cunning schemers have kidnapped the child, controlled, educated and developed all its strength, talents and powers and pitted them against its creator. In the hands of the workers Capital would be the obedient, submissive child of its creator, its father, but in the hands of the class nostrums as Home Rule, peasant | drone, the parasite, the robber, the pithe thief, the capitalist, it becomes, if not the enemy, the deadly nstrument in the hands of the enemy, of its own creator. J .- I must acknowledge that you Socialists generally know what you are talking about.

U. S .- It behooves everybody to do the same. Consistency is a jewel, force it can't be worn as a breastpin or used as a headlight. Let us not hear you repeat the silly lie, that "Capital and Labor are brothers." It is liable to cause suspicions of illegitimacy, bastardy or something worse.

THE WORK THAT TELLS.

The Socialist Labor Party is quite actve in this fall's campaign. A number meetings have been held in White Plains streets and there is no denving the fact that the arguments of the orators have set many men to thinking. The people are thinking-and thinking bard, too-that the days of trust combinations to control the necessaries of life should be near an end .- The White Plains Argus.

The New England Cotton Manufacurers' Association has decided to change its name to American. Why not? Its exploitation is no longer confined to New England, but has extended to the To this the Southern child labor roblem bears eloquent testimony. Make it American by all means.

The address of the president of the New Eugland Cotton Manufacturers' Association illustrates the trend of capitalist development. It was mainly devoted to a consideration of technical and engineering problems as related to cotton goods manufacture. Labor was not in it. it will be out of it more than ever whe these problems are solved by the instal-lation of more perfect labor-displacing and labor-intensifying machinery.

To The Daily and Weekly People— I wish to draw the attention of the comrades to a matter affecting Connol-ly's meetings. It seems that not sufficient attention is given to the selling ers' Republic in most meetings until it being able to go back with a good report on the sale of these. I would sug-gest, therefore, that the comrades arrange properly for the handling of the cards at the coming meetings by dele gating the work to two or more comrades according to size of audience to be covered. Making the Galled Jade Wince. 'To The Daily and Weekly People— The New York Labor News Company has received a communication from Boston, Mass., September 28, which reads as follows:
"Section Boston has ordered 15,000 copies of the leaflet 'Socialist Labor Party and Social Democratic Party.' We want them sent on at once. Many of the mem bers were in favor of ordering 30,000.

We have observed that the circulation of this leaflet is causing the S. D. P.

great uneasiness.
"J. F. Stevens, Organizer." We wish again to call the attention of Party organizations to the importance of the above mentioned leaflet. It is absolutely necessary to warn sympathizers against the bogus Socialist party. If, you would reap the full benefit of the agitation now being carried on by the S. L. P., circulate the documentary evidence of the poltroonery practiced by the party of many names. As observed by the Boston comrades this exposure of their record is making even these dirty tools of capitalism wince. The perusal of the leaflet must decide the action of any intelligent workingman who wishe to cast a vote for Socialism. Circulate the leaflet, we are prepared to fill orders. Showing Up the Kangs' Dirty Record To The Daily and Weekly People-The Kangs had a meeting here recently After the speaker, one Ufert, had said some things about the Trust problem and had called down the Reps and Dems he jumped off the box. But he was not to be let off so easy, for Comrade Kahr stopped him with an interrogation as to whether questions were permitted. Ufert could not very well edge out of this and the questions came. The first was: "You have just designated the Republican party and the Democratic party as being hostile to the working class, and this being so, how am I to understand the action of your party in the case of Morris Eichmann, of West Hoboken, N. J., who ran on the Republican, 'Dem-ocratic, Citizen and "Socialist" tickets?" Great astonishment among the audience and great foaming at the mouth on the part of the Kangs. Social Democrata" Vote at Republican Caucus For Labor Skinners in Violation of the Law.

To The Daily and Weekly People. The set of freaks in this town who are variously styled "Social Democrats." "Socialists," and other names too numerous to mention, have given us another example in the noble waging of the class struggle.

It occurred at the Republican caucus The great interest in the caucuses in this district was caused by the candidacy of the present congressional representative and of General Blackmar. The Daily People in an editorial a few days ago, referred to some of the phases of this struggle, especially the endorsement of labor skinner Lovering by Sammy Gompers, and the endorsement of General Blackmar by other labor fakirs. In the line of voters at the caucus were several Social Demo-crats of more or less prominence. We have the names of eight of them who voted, one of those was lately treasurer

Of course all of this is a Daily People lie so I want it published. Fraternally,

Good Work in Pueblo

To The Daily and Weekly People.-The Socialist Labor Party of Pueblo Colo., has been holding good open air meetings. At seven of these we sold 120 of the 5 cent pamphlets.

The pure and simple trades unions are a turmoil due to the fight between the F. of Hell and the A. T. U. Threats of all kinds are thick in the air. Each threatens dire disaster to the other. Amid it all the banner of the S. L. P. and the S. T. & L. A. is held up in good held here, one Shartel, a cigarmaker by trade, made the following statement: 'The International Cigarmakers were on strike in New York at Kerbs, Wertheim & Schuffer's shop; De Leon went down there, organized scabs to take their places, and marched them to the shop under es-cort of the militia." Shartel claims to be a personal observer of the affair. Here we believe his story to be a boldfaced lie. W. Knight. Pueblo, Colo, Sept. 22.

[Shartel's story is not a bold-faced, but a sneaky-faced lie. His yarn about De Leon is an invention of the whole cloth. The labor fakirs set the lie affoat to cover up the crime they committed during that strike in continuing it and bleeding the workingmen out of contributions, six nonths after they knew the strike was lost, the firm having its out-of-town factories in full running order. The documents on this fact were made public by themselves when they fell out among themselves.—ED. THE PEOPLE.]

A Good Way to Push The Monthly. To The Daily and Weekly People .-Last Tuesday night Section Gardner held an agitation meeting at Miller's Opera House. We had a good crowd Organizer Anderson delivered an able address on Revolutionary Socialism. The audience liked the address so well that we took three subscriptions for The People and twenty for The Monthly People. Comrades, you will find your agitation meetings furnish an excellent opportunity to push the Monthly. The comrades here are enthusiastic over the Monthly idea and we will send in another list next week.

We have had an important addition to the section in the person of Theodore Smith. He is a good worker. On October 14 we will hold another meeting in Miller's Opera House. Comrade Au derson will speak on the Era of Capitalism. The working class hear us gladly.

Nathan L. Griest, a Rising Starlin the Fakir's Heaven.

To The Daily and Weekly People-When under date of December 16, 1898, Frank Jordan (the same Jordan so large ly mentioned of late on account of the letter of O. M. Sachter, of Pittsburg, to him with its famous, "Now Frank, at them") wrote to me as follows: "The Colorado Sections, Socialist Labor Party, have voted to pay Comrade Griest $25 per month and keep him agitating, organizing and visiting already organized sections all through the year," and that to accept the State Committee's offer Comrade Griest had to refuse position as expert chemist for a a position as expert chemist for a huge mining concern that would have bound him by a three-year contract at $200 American gold equivalent in Mexican current coin, for Mexico was to be his field for them—they are an enorm-ous concern?"—I dropped my head in shame, pounded my breast and said to The Kangs were now hopping mad, and wanted to take Kahr by the throat as they had done to a comrade two years ago. It seems when you scratch a Kanor his material welfare and aerocany exchange a certain monthly income of $200 American gold for $25 of proletarian money. Since then I have grown more sceptical, caused by the fact that so many grafters in our ranks have been driven from cover and every one of them could not say enough about how much "he had sacrificed" for the S. L. P. Shortly after the Beaumont outrage, of which Comrade Lyon was the victim, Griest wrote to a Texas comrade that he was anxious to go to Beaumont and carry out the work begun by Lyon. He was full of fire and ardor and was He was full of fire and ardor and was willing to macrifice himself again for the emancipation of our class, if he only could get transportation from California. That transportation not coming forth, he was content to get to El Paso, willing to do anything in order to do some organizing for the party, "if necessary fake on the street" (as stated in a letter from Los Angeles of March 23, 1902, to above mentioned comrade). He got to El Paso, but never attached himself to the Texas State Committee. Since then the lampoonists made their appearance in the party and in a letter to the same comrade he deplored the "split" and said that those internal dissensions disgusted him and that the party is torn wide open.

That his love for faking, as expressed above, did not stop with being willing to fake on the street, is conclusively shown by the following that I just received from El Paso:

Allegheny, Pa., Sept. 25.—A sickly ambition is responsible for the conditions here, but let me say that with very few exceptions, such as Remmel, for in-stance, the S. L. Versus G. A. Brown.

In the February elections of 1900 the Thirteenth Ward Branch, Section Allegheny County, nominated a full ward ticket, amongst whom were Anton Fenrich and Wm. J. Eberle, candidates for Common Council on the S. L. P. ticket.

The Democrats also put up a full ticket, but many of them were fied with their candidates for Common Council, some would vote for one and some for the other of the two, but only very few voted straight.

Now, if those who split went over and

"READER," BLYTHSDALE, PA.—Unquestionably, "where there is, so much smoke, there must be some fire." The wonder is that, being so near rittsburg, you are still looking for the fire. Do you read the correspondence under the standing head "Light is Breaking?" You will there find the letter of A. G. Brown showing that W. J. Eberle tried to use the S. L. P. in the crooked political way of capitalist ward heelers. Do you want any more fire than that to explain the volumes of blackguard smoke that he and his accomplices have been raising? In the Social Democracy, such political chicanery endears a man to his party; in the S. L. P. the man who indulges in such practices knows his name is Dennis; the fire of his crookedness burns him out of the l'arty; in the process of his burning out, dense volumes of smoke are emitted. Yes indeed there was a tire.

"——," PROVIDENCE, R. I.—The large number of letters from Curran and Eberle to comrades in all parts of the country that have been sent in here, coupled with other facts, now make quite clear what the "plan of campaign" was. It was this: The several "Statements" were to come down upon the membership at stated intervals. The repetition of the same general charges to have its effect. The Sanial and Keinard letters were reserved as trump cards. They were expected to floor whoever still had preserved sense enough to stand. Acids and letters were expected to floor whoever still had preserved sense enough to stand. But that was not all. An extensive reptifelike correspondence was kept up with all parts of the country, making additional false charges, holung out all sorts of false hopes. It was then expected that delegates to a convention in an atmosphere laise charges, holding out all sorts of laise shopes. It was then expected that delegates elected to a convention in an atmosphere that can be conventioned, would be easy puppets for these gentry to manage. And they would capture and scuttle the Party. Of course this "plan of campaign" proceeded from the theory that the Party was made up of cockroaches—and there the conspiracy died.

You will then realize how believe and his accomplices must have felt a cut across their faces every time The People cow-hided the Social Democrats for their acts of political corruption. Think still a little further, and you will realize how, in pursuit of its duty to castigate treason to the working class. The People regularly hits more crooks than it knows of. Nothing was known here until now about that base manneuvre of political corruption whereby Eberle ran as sole candidate for Common Council. But he and his pals knew it; and they felt hit every time the corrupt practices of others were exposed; and their endeavors to hush up the matter must have become ever harder, due to The People's persistent lashing of every new act of corruption that it learned about. This explains much of the outbursts against the national officers that periodically break out from unexpected sources.
