THE UNREPRESSIBLE
CLASS CONFLICT IN COLORADO

The Struggle for the Eight-Hour Day—Its History, Significance and Failure, Cullminating in the Capitalist Bills of 1904.

Written by R. H. BRIMBLE.

Eugene, Colorado, 1904.

FIFTH EPILOGUE—Continued.

THE PORTLAND MINES ACCEPT UNION CONDITIONS.

It had been claimed that the trouble with the Portland management was due to a misunderstanding, and on August 31, Mr. R. E. Ewing, general manager of the Portland Mines, met with Mr. Burns and some of the workmen and discussed the matter with them. The obvious upshot of this was that no union organizers were permitted to visit the Portland Mines, and no attempt was made to bring about any unionization of the miners. But this was not to be the case.

The first move on the part of the miners was to bring to the attention of the manager of the El Paso Mines, who owned the property, the fact that the miners were being imported into the El Paso Mines, and demanded that they be brought out of the mine immediately.

On the 4th of the month, the miners went on strike, and the strike spread to the El Paso Mines, and a large body of miners met at the El Paso Mines and demanded that the union men be brought out of the mine immediately.

In the "Dawson Post" of September 5, we are informed as follows:

"Several of the Union Mine Owners' Association guaranty the expenses of the troops ordered to the El Paso Mines by the Portland management. The miners are willing to accept the terms of the agreement, but the Portland management refuses to negotiate. The miners are willing to accept the terms of the agreement, but the Portland management refuses to negotiate. The miners are willing to accept the terms of the agreement, but the Portland management refuses to negotiate.
