THE IMPRESSIBLE CLASS CONFLICT IN COLORADO

eighty-four for the Eight-Hour Day—Its History, Significance and Failure, Culminating in the Capitalist Rites of 1904.

By J. B. BRADWELL

FORGE CHANCE WITHOUT FRAUDULATION.

President Burns of the Portland, upon being questioned as to the existence of a conspiracy among the employees of the mine, stated that he was absolutely ignorant of any conspiracy and had never believed that there was any foundation for the charges. Needless to say, the evidence of support of the charge brought by the Mine-Owner’s Association in its proceedings was of no weight at all. As it gives as little as a picture in the Cripple Creek district.

An echo of the Portland affair was heard in the case of William Amine, a former watchman at the mine, who, after having been dismissed from his employment, attempted to shoot the employer of his wife; but he was arrested and confined in the jail, where he has remained.
PLATF0RM

Adapted at the Eleventh National Convention of the Socialist Labor Party, July 1904.

The Socialist Labor Party of America, in convention assembled, proclaims its desire for man's freedom, its hope for the people's happiness.

The necessity of government is to secure to every citizen the enjoyment of this right; but taught by experience we hold that mere freedom will not be sufficient to accomplish the end.

We hold that the true theory of politics is that the means by which it is to be accomplished must be by the ballot box; and that the people, in their free choice, should select the means by which they desire to be governed.

Your party is the party of the working class, the class which is for freedom and for happiness. It is the party which appeals to the people's wisdom and to their energy.

We endorse the statement of the American Federation of Labor:

"The Federation of Labor, in the name of the working classes of the United States, declares itself in favor of the establishment of the eight-hour day and in favor of the movement for the improvement of the conditions of labor."
