DANGEROUS CONCLUSION

Miners-Magazine

"Miners-Magazine," the organ of the Western Federation of Miners, has been playing the role of a 'vanguard' for the Federation in the battle against the trusts in the West. The latest number of this publication contains an article by William W. Blythe, an editor of the Federation, in which he states: "The policies of the trusts are entering into the mining industry more and more. The laborer's wages are being cut down and working hours are increased."

The Federation has been active in the fight against these trusts and has secured some important victories. In the state of Washington, the Federation secured the passage of a law which prohibits the use of strikebreakers. In the state of Colorado, the Federation has secured the passage of a law which requires the payment of higher wages to miners in certain districts.

The Federation is confident that it will continue to make progress in the fight against these trusts. It is determined to fight for the rights of the miners and to secure a better life for them.

More About the Elevator Man

The physical labor necessary to operate an elevator is done by people. There are a half dozen different types of work to be done, and each type is performed by a different kind of person. The one used in cutting the freight and loading the cars is the most demanding, physically. It is performed by a man who is standing on a platform, hoisting heavy weights over his head, and then dropping them into the freight car. The other types of work are less demanding, but they still require a great deal of strength and endurance. The one used in operating the cars is the most interesting, because it requires a great deal of skill and knowledge. It is performed by a man who is standing on a platform, hoisting heavy weights over his head, and then dropping them into the freight car. It is performed by a man who is standing on a platform, hoisting heavy weights over his head, and then dropping them into the freight car. The other types of work are less demanding, but they still require a great deal of strength and endurance.

Elevator operators may be divided into two groups: those who work in department stores, and those who work in residential buildings. In department stores, the elevator operator is responsible for operating the elevators, answering questions from customers, and making sure that the elevators are running smoothly. In residential buildings, the elevator operator is responsible for operating the elevators, answering questions from residents, and making sure that the elevators are running smoothly.

In hotels and apartment houses the job is much the same as that of a doorkeeper. In hotels, however, the job is much more important, and the operator is responsible for the security of the building and its occupants. In apartment houses, the job is much less important, and the operator is responsible for the security of the building and its occupants.

The wages of elevator operators are low, and they often have to pay for their own uniforms and lanyards. They also have to pay for their own meals and transportation. In some cities, the wages of elevator operators are higher, but they still have to pay for their own meals and transportation.

The arrangement between the elevator operator and the building owner is that the building owner pays the operator a certain amount of money each week, and the operator pays the building owner a certain amount of money each week. The building owner pays the operator a certain amount of money each week for the right to use the elevator, and the operator pays the building owner a certain amount of money each week for the right to use the elevator.

The figures given here are only a faint idea of what the operators are doing at the moment, and they only apply to the buildings in which they work. But there is no doubt that the operators are working in buildings in which they work. There is no doubt that the operators are working in buildings in which they work. There is no doubt that the operators are working in buildings in which they work.

TO THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

I am writing as a member of the Daily People.

The idea prevails in the minds of some that the Socialist Party is an important work to be done at the state convention, and the organization of the local party organization is a matter of primary importance. Your statement that "the party is not strong enough" is correct, for it would have the tendency to spread the party. I am of the opinion that an interested and active membership would be more than a necessity, and that the convention should be a real convention, with the people in charge of the work, and the party in control of the organization.

I am confident that the Daily People can and will work toward the establishment of a socialist party in Chicago.

H. C. STREIGHTER, May 2nd.

CHARTY AND THE WORKER.

To the Daily People.

The Daily People has had a great deal of press and press work for the past few months, and I have had the opportunity to work for the party in a number of different capacities. I was in Chicago last week and had the pleasure of meeting many of the workers who are active in the party, and I have been impressed by their energy and enthusiasm.

I have been interested in the work of the Daily People for some time, and I am glad to see that the party is making progress. I believe that the Daily People has a great future, and I hope that it will continue to grow and prosper.

Sincerely yours,

T. B. REINER.
