On the Chicago Manifesto

The Chicago Manifesto is a document outlining the demands of labor and trade unions. It was first published in 1932 and is a significant historical document that reflects the struggles and aspirations of workers during the Great Depression. The manifestos call for reforms in labor conditions, better wages, and protection against the negative effects of the economic crisis.

The Burning Question of TRADES UNIONISM

Trades Unionism in the United States

Trades Unionism in the United States is a book by the American labor historian Charles A. Beard. It was published in 1912 and is a classic work in the field of labor history. The book examines the development of trade unions in the United States, focusing on their role in shaping the labor movement and the broader political and social landscape of the time.
