Many have been the subjects of general and even of particular interest that have touched the weekly end of the month. This week, more than one, The Washington Post's editor, John W. woman D., with a report of the various activities of the woman's groups and women's movements in the United States. The woman's movement is growing by leaps and bounds, with women's groups organizing and holding meetings in all parts of the country. The Post's editor, John W. woman D., has been active in supporting women's rights, and has written articles on the subject in the Post's editorial pages. The Post's editor, John W. woman D., has been quoted as saying, "We believe that women have the same right to participate in the political process as men, and we will continue to support their efforts to achieve greater equality."
Red Sunday Commemorated

Buffalo, Jan. 21.—The "Red Sunday" Revolution of January 21, 1905, was a celebrated incident in the history of labor in Russia which, as a result of the strike action organized by a joint comité of the S.P.R. and P.R.W., I.W.W., and other organizations, was suppressed by the Red Labor Federation. Long before the date of the celebration of the first anniversary of the upheaval, when the chairman, O. Curtis, opened the meeting, to the crowd gathered at the above address, and by the following of the largest audience gathered in the last ten years, I.W.W. members were engaged in the festivities. As a result, a strong sing-song rendered by Vvurvats, a Russian song, was the opening number, and the audience was made rapturous.

Then T.K. Jaipey was introduced and gave an interesting résumé of the events which occurred in the strike. He told of the several points, which aroused enthusiasm, which led to the creation of the Red Labor Federation, to the suppression of the strike, the events of the year in Russia, and the success of the strike. He pointed out that the strike had not been a failure, but rather a success, in that it had shown the world that the struggle for the rights of the working class was not over, but that it must continue until the workers' rights were secured.

The speaker concluded by saying that the strike was a great lesson to the world, and that it had shown the world that the workers' rights must be secured, and that the struggle must continue until the workers' rights were secured.

The meeting was addressed by a Red Labor Federation official, who gave a detailed account of the events of the strike, and of the success of the strike. He pointed out that the strike had been a great success, and that the workers' rights must be secured.

The meeting was adjourned, and the audience dispersed, to the accompaniment of music, which filled the air with its sweet melodies.

SOCIALIST VOTE IN THE UNITED STATES

WEELE PEOPLE, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1917

If you let a steam-steam, when it is full of moisture, and cool the supposing-steam, it will not expand. It will come to a boil, it will close by its own weight. This, we have been told, is the key of the success of the Socialist party. The Socialist party is the key of the success of the Socialist movement. It is the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States.

Do not be deceived by the superstitious nonsense of those who assert that the Socialist party is the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States. The Socialist party is not the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States. The Socialist party is not the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States.

But we have seen that the Socialist party is the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States. The Socialist party is not the key of the success of the Socialist movement of the United States.
