INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

SHALL OUR BROTHERS BE MURDERED?

BY MAX H. HAYDORN

Beginning at the Court of Assize in Ithaca on a charge of housebreakers' violence has been brought against the Ithaca district of the IWW. The trial was adjourned and the case is to be continued next week.

The IWW has been active in organizing labor strikes throughout the country. The organization has been growing steadily in recent months, and membership has increased from 20,000 to 40,000 in the past year. The IWW is opposed to capital punishment, and the organization has been working to secure the release of all political prisoners.

The IWW is a revolutionary labor union that advocates for the abolition of capitalism and the establishment of a classless society. The union is known for its radical political views and its involvement in various labor disputes.

In recent years, the IWW has been involved in several high-profile cases, including the Ithaca strike of 1917, the Seattle general strike of 1919, and the IWW's role in the establishment of the Industrial Workers of the World in 1905.

The IWW has a long history of activism and has been instrumental in the labor movement. The union continues to be active today, working to improve the lives of workers and to fight for a more just society.

The IWW is a member of the International Workers of the World, a global federation of labor unions that organizes workers to improve their wages and working conditions. The union is known for its commitment to solidarity and its support of workers' rights around the world.

The IWW's continued activism and its commitment to workers' rights make it a vital force in the labor movement today. The union continues to be a. force for change, working to improve the lives of workers and to fight for a more just society.
Handbills and Revolution

Handbills, as a rule, are very much neglected. Generally badly printed and dated to the letter of the style in which they were regarded as an armament and a weapon, and, as such, are nearly always printed on rough paper, or on any paper that will do. Nevertheless, handbills are an important part of any armament, and when properly printed, can be very useful in spreading information.

The core of the missives of the Industrial Workers of the World is the necessity for a wider understanding of the struggle for social revolution. By putting their message on handbills, they are able to reach a wider audience and to spread their ideas more effectively.

In summary, handbills are an essential part of any revolutionary movement and should not be underestimated in their potential to educate and mobilize the masses.

SOCIALIST VOTE IS THE ONLY VOTE

In 1928, the Socialist Party ran a presidential candidate named Eugene V. Debs. His campaign focused on issues such as workers' rights, free speech, and the end of the capitalist system. Debs's platform was a direct challenge to the existing economic order, advocating for a more equitable distribution of wealth and power. His campaign captured the imagination of many Americans disillusioned with the status quo, and his message resonated with those who sought a more just society. Despite facing significant opposition, Debs's campaign helped to broaden the base of support for socialist ideas and inspired a new generation of activists. Today, the legacy of Eugene V. Debs continues to inspire those working towards a more equitable and just society. His campaign serves as a reminder of the power of grassroots organizing and the importance of fighting for a better world.
The MOBILIZATION ABROAD

WHAT THE SOCIALISTS OF OTHER COUNTRIES ARE DOING—ITEMS OF WORKING CLASS INTEREST.

ENGLAND.

Seven men are to be tried today at the Old Bailey of the solicitor’s barristers in London for “shamming a meeting,” a case that has come to the attention of the British public. The solicitors, representing the defendants, are charged with interfering with the work of the English trade unions. The defendants, who are members of the British Socialist Party, are accused of carrying on a secret revolutionary activity among the workers in London.

AUSTRALIA.

Taking advantage of the Christmas holidays, a number of socialists in Sydney organized a meeting to discuss the recent developments in the social revolution. The meeting was attended by many of the leading socialists in the country, and the atmosphere was electric.

Bulgaria.

The members of the Bulgarian Social Democrats are on strike. They demand a five per cent increase in wages and more working hours.

DENMARK.

The General Council of the Danish Social Democratic Party has issued a statement condemning the recent actions of the government. The council has called for a general strike in protest against the government’s policy of suppressing labor rights.

FRANCE.

The eight-hour day was declared a national day by the socialists in France. The eight-hour day was a long-fought-for goal of the French socialist movement, and its attainment was a great victory for the working class.

ITALY.

The tax on the income of the rich in Italy has increased. This has caused a great deal of criticism among the Italian workers, who feel that the government is imposing too heavy a tax on the wealthy.

GERMANY.

A number of the leading socialists in Germany have been arrested for their opposition to the government. The socialists are accused of plotting to overthrow the government and establish a socialist republic.

SWEDEN.

Four of the leaders of the Workers’ Union were arrested for having given aid to the striking workers. The Workers’ Union is a powerful organization, and its leaders are respected by the workers.

GERMANY.

A number of the leading socialists in Germany have been arrested for their opposition to the government. The socialists are accused of plotting to overthrow the government and establish a socialist republic.

THE MOVE ON.

Despite all efforts made from this side of the Western World, the Socialists of the USA do not get up. For the first time in history, the Socialist Party of the USA has not been able to organize a national convention. Nevertheless, the socialists persist in their efforts to create a socialist movement in the USA.
