S INCE LINCOLN

Preliminary.
In utilizing the theory and nature of socialism, it must be borne in mind that the word "socialism" is used to designate a number of different sub-systems of ideas, none of which can be considered as a unitary whole. The present task of the Socialist is that of making clear the various interpretations of the present social system. The present task of the Socialist is to demonstrate that, in essence, the law of the present society is a system of rules and regulations which are designed to promote the welfare of all its members. The Socialist must demonstrate that, by changing the social structure, it is possible to create a society in which all individuals are free to pursue their own interests and to enjoy the benefits of a system which is designed to promote the welfare of all its members.

DEFINITIONS

Socialism is the system of government in which the means of production are owned and controlled by the community, and in which the products of labor are distributed on the principle of need. Socialism is a system of values and beliefs which is based on the idea that the social system should be designed to promote the welfare of all its members.

"Socialism, in short, means that in industry, in the economic arrangements of society, the collective or co-operative ownership, control and operation of the means of production, transfer to all who wish to work, compensation for services rendered, free decision as to what shall be done, and equal division of the results of labor."

- "Socialism," by Dr. Sidney & Beatrice Webb.

"Socialism is the recognition of the essential unity of the economic and social problems of human life, the recognition of the fundamental equality of all men, and the recognition of the fact that the means of production can be more efficiently controlled by the community than by private individual owners."

- "Socialism," by Dr. Sidney & Beatrice Webb.

In conclusion, it is clear that the present system of government is not socialist, and that the Socialist is the system of government which is designed to promote the welfare of all its members. The Socialist must demonstrate that, by changing the social structure, it is possible to create a society in which all individuals are free to pursue their own interests and to enjoy the benefits of a system which is designed to promote the welfare of all its members.

IDEAL CIT Y

Cosimo Notto, M. D.

RE DUCED TO 75 CENTS.

"The story says we claim an economic or sociological merit in it, or that we claim any advantage at all for the man who is at the head of any one of the various types of socialized enterprises, and the result is that we are liable to be cast aside as a mere empty name of some unknown scientific teacher of the day who is not content with the present state of our society, and who does not consider that the present state of our society is the best that can be obtained."

"The Socialist is a political party which advocates the adoption of a system of socialism, i.e., the abolition of private property in land and the production and distribution of all necessary products of labor, in accordance with the principle that all the material means of production, whatever their source, are social property."
THE SMALL FARMER

From Gentleman, Otis, this letter of tragedy and remonstrance has run in:

DEAR SIR,

In my letter last week I expressed the opinion that our present system of farming is such that the average farmer is unable to make a living. In this letter I will endeavor to prove my statement.

Here are some of the facts that I have gathered:

1. The average farmer is unable to pay his bills on time.
2. The average farmer is unable to save money for his children's education.
3. The average farmer is unable to buy a new tractor or combine.
4. The average farmer is unable to buy a new home.
5. The average farmer is unable to buy a new car.

These facts prove that our present system of farming is not working for the average farmer. I urge that something be done to help the small farmer.
